CONGRESS MAY BOOST SECURITY PLAN PAYMENTS

Many Would Treble U. S. Outlay.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Congress, it developed today, may double, perhaps treble, the old age pensions and unemployment insurance suggested in the administration bill to provide social and economic security.

With passage of the legislation a foregone conclusion, sentiment is running strongly in both houses in favor of boosting the amount of benefits all along the line. The advocates of the Townsend old age pension of $200 a month are the loudest in demanding a greater degree of generosity than the President has proposed.

Under Mr. Roosevelt's plan the federal government would contribute a maximum of $15 a month to state old age pension funds, which on a 50-50 basis would give a person 65 years old or more $30 a month. Similarly the federal government would contribute $15 a week for 15 weeks to unemployed persons.

Annual Cost 218 Millions.

The cost of these benefits and other social welfare subsidies the President estimated at 98 millions in the next fiscal year and 218 millions a year thereafter. Those who are dissatisfied with the administration plan are talking of boosting the pensions and unemployment benefits to a figure that would cost the federal government the first year not less than 200 millions more and from 400 to 500 millions a year thereafter.

Asked about this movement at his press conference today, the President said that there is no limitation on the amount of the old age pension and the unemployment compensation. It is for each state to determine the amount of the benefit each person receives. The only limitation in the administration bill is on the amount the federal government contributes to the benefit fixed by the state.

The $15 limitation on the federal contribution, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized, was found necessary to keep the undertaking within the bounds of sound financing. There is, however, nothing to prevent a state from fixing an old age pension at $100 a month, for example, the federal government contributing $15 and the state $85.

Hearings Start Next Week.

The senate finance committee will begin hearings on the bill Monday and the house ways and means committee Tuesday. The President said that it would be desirable to get the legislation passed before April in order to obtain the necessary state legislation from the legislatures, many of which conclude their sessions by early spring.

The 3 per cent tax on pay rolls for unemployment insurance and 2½ per cent for old age pensions would fall lightly on some industries, heavily on others. In some industries labor costs are only 3 per cent, in others as high as 70 per cent.

On the basis of an estimated 160 million dollar pay roll in the meat packing industry in 1934 which would be taxable under the Wagner bill, the industry would be expected to bear a levy of $1,600,000 in 1936, when industry would pay 1 per cent of pay roll for unemployment insurance.

The Big Four packers—Armour, Swift, Cudahy, and Wilson—who do an enormous by-product business, may well have a total liability under the proposed act paralleling that of the entire meat packing industry.

Packers' Levy Near 9 Millions.

The 1934 pay roll of the meat packing industry was roundly 133,000 wage earners. It is estimated the $1,600,000 tax for 1936 would be increased to $5,600,000 in 1938, when industry would be called upon to pay the full 3 per cent unemployment insurance plus a ½ per cent old age pension tax. By 1957, when the full 5½ per cent tax on industry would be in effect, the levy would be increased to $8,800,000.

The large dairy companies, National Dairy Products and Borden, have pay rolls that run in the neighborhood of 60 million dollars each, so that a tax of 1 per cent in 1936 would amount to about $600,000. At the maximum, in 1957, the tax would amount to $3,300,000.

Total pay rolls in the department stores average about 18 per cent of sales volume. Thus a store or chain

BIG STILL SEIZED BY U. S. AGENTS IN LAKE COUNTY

Six agents of the treasury department's alcohol tax unit last night raided a barn on a farm a mile and a half south of Wadsworth on the Town Line road in Lake county, and seized a $30,000 still and 75,000 gallons of mash.

The still, said to be the largest ever found in Lake county, is on the farm of George V. Dodge. The plant equipment included a cooking kettle 60 by 60 by 10 feet, two 40 horse power boilers, a 5,000 gallon water supply tank, and large quantities of sugar and molasses.

No one was at work in the place when the agents arrived. Dodge, who declared he had rented the barn to people he did not know personally, was held and will be brought to Chicago. A wrecking crew was sent out to destroy the still. The agents said that the place had been running since October and had produced 200,000 gallons of alcohol with a present bootleg value of about $700,000.

SEASON'S WORST COLD WAVE MAY HIT CITY TONIGHT

A cold wave, with temperatures expected to drop to zero and perhaps lower, is in store for Chicago tonight and tomorrow, according to Weather Forecaster W. P. Day, and the city may experience the most severe cold of the winter.

Mr. Day said the frigid weather is sweeping down on the city from northwestern Canada, and added:

"Predicting a cold wave nearly two days in advance is generally a pretty risky thing, but in this case the indications are so pronounced that we can safely say Chicago is 'in for it' this week-end."

Yesterday afternoon the advancing cold wave had gripped the northwestern states, with 22 degrees below zero recorded at Great Falls, Mont. Minnesota, also in the path of the cold, reported a record of 25 below zero at Bemidji, and subzero temperatures descended on other portions of the state and on North Dakota.

Rev. Johnston Myers, 77, Reported Seriously Ill

The Rev. Dr. Johnston Myers, veteran pastor of Immanuel Baptist church, 3220 South Michigan avenue, was reported seriously ill yesterday in his home at 1715 East 55th street. Dr. Myers, who is 77 years old, has been pastor of Immanuel church for 40 years. He recently announced that he would resign his pastorate in June. During his entire ministry Dr. Myers has maintained a bread line which has become famous.

Jan. 25 Fixed as Deadline on Auto Plates

Police Commissioner Allman issued a warning yesterday to all motorists who have not purchased their 1935 state and city licenses to do so by Jan. 25. After that date, on the instructions of City Controler Robert B. Upham, the police will serve summonses on all drivers whose automobiles still carry the 1934 licenses. These summonses are returnable in the district police courts.

Chief William F. Collins of the county highway police announced that his force would coöperate in the campaign against dilatory motorists.

Drastic Action After Jan. 25.

"According to statute," Controler Upham explained, "the actual deadline for obtaining the new licenses is the first of the year and the city and the state were several weeks earlier than in past years in having the license plates and stickers ready.

"We are allowing the period of grace until Jan. 25, but that is absolutely the last day. After that time drastic police action will be taken."

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes said at Springfield yesterday that he had requested the state highway police, in particular the motorcycle division, to stop drivers with 1934 plates and inform them that they are violating the law and should immediately get the new plates.

The state began issuing licenses last Dec. 26 and to date has given out 120,000 more sets of plates than at this time last year, Secretary Hughes said.

Many Old Plates Still Displayed.

A survey of the loop and surrounding vicinity yesterday indicated that a great majority of automobile owners are still carrying the 1934 plates.

Among the new and expensive cars carrying the old plates, taken at random during the survey, were the following: Cadillac sedan, license number 380-288; Cadillac sedan, 850-286; Cadillac sedan, 366-933; Lincoln coupe, 617-151; Packard roadster, 103-991; La Salle convertible coupe, 183-246, and Buick brougham, 558-370.

On the contrary the following cars, of older and less expensive varieties, also selected at random, bore the 1935 plates: Ford touring car, 82-015; Ford sedan, 166-268; Ford coupe, 27-605; Ford coupe, 57-483; Chevrolet coupe, 306-862, and Dodge sedan, 126-626.

12 Red Foxes Are Killed by Farmers in Iowa

Davenport, Ia., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Eight red foxes were killed in Davenport, Lincoln, and Pleasant Valley townships by Oscar Schaefer, Scott county farmer, and his son, Edward, during the last month, it was announced today by the Scott County Sportsmen's association. Four other foxes were killed by a neighbor.

ALFONSO PUTS UP CROWN JEWELS FOR $166,800 LOAN

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 18.—An investigation by Czech authorities revealed today that Spain's royal regalia has been pledged by former King Alfonso in this country as collateral for a personal loan of four million Czech crowns [about $166,800]. The exiled king, however, has not received more than 400,000 crowns. Nevertheless, the crown jewels are at present in the vaults of the Bratislava bank.

A group of Czech industrialists had negotiated the loan to Alfonso, but the Prague government halted the transaction in accordance with existing exchange regulations.

The question now arises of disposition of the crown jewels. Alfonso's bankers are making every effort to get them out of the country by reimbursing the 400,000 crowns advanced.

Flings Ax at Birth Control Display; Woman Seized

Ridgefield, N. J., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Miss Adelaide Kenna, 49, a church worker, was arrested today charged with malicious mischief after she was alleged to have thrown an ax through a drug store window where a birth control exhibit was on display. This township is in the center of an area where birth control information is being widely disseminated in the face of widespread protests from church groups.

O'HARA INDICTED BY U. S. JURY IN MALOY TAX QUIZ

Ralph J. O'Hara, an organizer for the Motion Picture Operators' union, was indicted yesterday by the federal grand jury on a charge of perjury. The action grew out of testimony given by O'Hara during an investigation of the income tax returns of Thomas E. Maloy, czar of the union.

Federal Judge John P. Barnes, before whom the indictment was returned, set bond at $15,000 and issued a capias for O'Hara's arrest. If he is convicted on the charge he will face a maximum punishment of five years in the penitentiary and $2,000 fine.

Acquitted in Union Shooting.

O'Hara, long active in the turbulent affairs of the operators' union, was acquitted in June of the fatal shooting of Ralph Oser, leader of a rebel faction of the organization. On Jan. 11 O'Hara appeared before the federal grand jury and denied that he had handled sums of money for Maloy in a deal to allow theater owners to drop excess operators.

This testimony, according to the indictment, was in direct opposition to facts in possession of the jurors. O'Hara is reported to have accepted more than $100,000 from theater owners in return for which they were allowed to rid themselves of unneeded operators.

Theater owners, named in the indictment as making payments to O'Hara include George Christos, Joseph Stern, Aaron Jones, Jimmie Costan, zone manager for Warner Brothers; Barney Balaban, president of Balaban & Katz; Clarence E. Beck, owner of the Castle theater, and Edward Silverman, president of Essaness corporation.

Report Maloy Tax Action.

As the indictment was returned it was reported that action against Maloy on a charge of income tax evasion is expected. Government scrutiny of Maloy's tax returns between 1929 and 1933 first began early in 1933. Since that time the investigation has dropped from sight twice and has been revived on both occasions.

A. P. Madden, head of the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department; E. Riley Campbell, assistant United States attorney, and Joseph P. O'Connor, special assistant attorney general, recently reopened the investigation following a raid by gunmen on the Maloy home near Michigan City, in which $53,000 was reported to have been taken.

Steps in O'Hara's Career.

O'Hara, a product of the west side, first came to public attention as an operator of dance halls. Later he reorganized the piano tuners' union, founded a shoe shiners' organization, and then joined forces with Maloy and the motion picture operators' organization.

In 1922 his union career was almost brought to an end during a party in a west side saloon. During the festivities he dropped his automatic pistol on the floor. It was discharged and the pullet passed through his body a half inch from his heart.

Notoriety has followed O'Hara through the years, climaxing with the inability of the state to refute his story that he shot Oser in self-defense. Although he has been arrested a number of times, and made several appearances in court, the state has never gained a conviction against him.

DECREE IN GOLD CASE ON MONDAY IS POSSIBILITY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—(AP)—The possibility of a Supreme court ruling in the gold cases on Monday arose tonight as a study of its records revealed precedent for announcing a verdict and filing the opinion later. The court has had one consultation on the case. Another will be held tomorrow if its regular schedule is followed. Should the ruling not be issued Monday it could not be announced until Feb. 4.

Precedent for announcing the ruling and then writing the opinion goes back to 1905 and a case in which E. H. Harriman brought suit against the Northern Securities company involving stock transactions in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads.

Lindy to Blaze New Air Trail Across Pacific

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

New York, Jan. 18.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is expected to take the leading part in the conquest of another ocean for United States' aviation as soon as the court in Flemington, N. J., decides whether Bruno Richard Hauptmann murdered his son.

The flyer, it was revealed today, is expected to fly the Pacific ocean as a preliminary to the establishment of an experimental air transport service between America and the orient which will reduce the transportation time between the orient and the new world to 60 flying hours.

Airways Speeds Plan.

The Pan-American Airways system, whose technical committee Col. Lindbergh heads, rapidly is advancing plans for establishing an experimental air transport service to link California, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, and other American possessions in the Pacific and the orient.

Col. Lindbergh was engaged with plans for this service when Hauptmann was arrested, and as a result of the arrest the colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh returned east from California four months ago.

It is not expected that Mrs. Lindbergh will make the Pacific flight, as she did the two trips with the colonel last year.

Lindbergh Makes Study.

Lindbergh, who has played an important part in the pioneering of the present Pan-American routes that link the United States with 33 countries of the West Indies, Central and South America, and also are established in Alaska and China, has conducted a large share of the actual field research looking toward the early establishment of an American air service across both the Pacific and the Atlantic.

The company's actual plans for operations from the Pacific coast are not known, but it is certain Los Angeles will be a terminal and that San Francisco will figure as an operating base. The company's program is known to contemplate serving both Los Angeles and San Francisco in the trans-Pacific service.

Pilots Train in Giant Plane.

A giant transocean training plane, the Clipper-Pioneer, sister ship of the record holding Brazilian Clipper, has been delivered to Pan-American's marine operating base at Miami and now is being used in a series of flights by which pilots and other marine personnel are being trained in overwater operations up to 3,000 miles, the nonstop range of the four engined flying boat.

The plane will be flown to California, probably in about three weeks. Then, if the Hauptmann trial is ended, Lindbergh probably will join the pioneering crew in California.

The increasing importance of the orient as an outlet for American trade and the rapid convergence of nationalized European air lines upon th t strategic area have, it is known, caused Pan-American to speed its plans for the Pacific service.

American traders in that area are faced with planned and actual air competition by the British, the Netherlanders, the Germans, the French, the Italians, and the Japanese.

BANKERS LIST DEPOSITS AFTER RANSOM IS PAID

Wife Cries Liar at Woman Witness.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
(Pictures on Back Page.)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—The sudden wealth which descended upon Bruno Richard Hauptmann and his wife after the payment of $50,000 ransom for the murdered Lindbergh child was described in Judge Thomas W. Trenchard's court today.

There was much more additional circumstantial evidence piled up by the state in the prosecution of the German carpenter accused of slaying Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's son during the day, more than a score of witnesses taking the stand.

The strip of board from a closet in Hauptmann's home which bore the penciled address and telephone number of Dr. John F. Condon, who paid the ransom with Col. Lindbergh's money, was introduced into evidence. Walter Lyle, the gasoline station attendant who noted down Hauptmann's license number after receiving a $10 ransom bill, was a witness.

Accuses Witness of Lying.

But the main feature of the day remained the unexpected explosion of the defendant's wife. Just as her husband had caused confusion yesterday by calling a witness a liar, Mrs. Hauptmann leaped to her feet and accused a woman witness for the state of giving false testimony.

The witness was Mrs. Ella Achenbach, another of the "surprise" witnesses for the state. She declared that on the day or two days after the kidnaping on March 1, 1932, she talked with Hauptmann and his wife and they told her they had just returned from a trip.

She testified further that Hauptmann had an injured ankle at the time and limped considerably. The state's contention is that Hauptmann fell while descending the ladder outside the Lindbergh home with the baby in his arms and that the baby was killed and Hauptmann's ankle injured in the fall.

OUTBURST STIRS COURT

Mrs. Hauptmann's emotional outburst came at about 12:05 p. m. It precipitated almost as much tumult as was occasioned by her husband's outcries at yesterday's session.

Apparently the Hauptmanns were aware of the nature of Mrs. Achenbach's testimony, because both appeared excited when Attorney General David T. Wilentz called her name. The police surrounding the defendant were watching him carefully, but none seemed to think of the responsibility of his wife making a disturbance.

The witness, Mrs. Achenbach, was a stout, placid woman who spoke with a pronounced German accent. In the preliminary questioning she explained that in March, 1932, she had lived "five city lots" away from the Hauptmann home in the Bronx.

Neighbor of Hauptmanns.

"So you were a neighbor of the Hauptmanns at that time?" asked Wilentz.

"I was," said Mrs. Achenbach, complacently.

She glanced at Hauptmann and his wife as she made the answer. Wilentz continued.

Q.—When did you first meet Mrs. Hauptmann? A.—In 1927. I took her into my employ as a waitress.

Q.—Did you also meet Hauptmann? A.—He used to come and call for her occasionally at work.

Q.—Do you remember the Lindbergh kidnaping? A.—I do.

Q.—Did you see the defendant, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, some time after that kidnaping? A.—I did.

Q.—Tell us what happened.

Mrs. Hauptmann Trembles.

Mrs. Hauptmann was observed to be trembling. She twisted her red, calloused hands nervously and bit her lips. The stout woman in the witness chair said calmly:

"I came home from a trip. On the day following the kidnaping, or two days after, Mrs. Hauptmann came to my front porch. She said she and her husband had just got back from a trip."

Mrs. Hauptmann sprang to her feet. In a German accented voice similar to that of the witness she cried: "Mrs. Achenbach, you are lying! You are lying!"

There was the usual uproar which has accompanied similar incidents at

SPEED BRITISH PLAN

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A daily air mail service to India and Africa, a thrice a week service to Australia, and an air mail line across the northern Atlantic to Canada will become realities early in 1936 if present plans are carried through. Civil air fleets will be increased tenfold.

It is hoped the project will meet the this remarkable trial. Hauptmann seemed ready to rush to his wife's side, but the heavy hands of state troopers were upon his shoulders.

Justice Trenchard Flushes.

The judge's countenance flushed. Edward J. Reilly, chief defense attorney, tried to look displeased but failed signally.

Col. Lindbergh looked curiously at Mrs. Hauptmann, who now was sobbing, tears running down her cheeks.

Prosecutor Wilentz was livid with anger.

"We object to these demonstrations, whether they are staged or not!" he shouted.

This, in turn, made Attorney Reilly very excited. He suggested that the attorney general's remark be stricken from the record.

But the judge wasn't striking any remarks from the record for the moment. Instead he intended making a few remarks himself.

Reilly Given Warning.

"This sort of thing must stop," he told Reilly. "It is unthinkable that these demonstrations should continue."

Hauptmann started to speak, but Defense Attorney C. Lloyd Fisher quickly put a hand over the defendant's mouth.

"I must insist," spoke up the attorney general again, "that something be done about these exhibitions. This is the third time such things have happened. Yesterday we had the delightful defendant's little show. Either the court is conducting this trial or Mr. and Mrs. Hauptmann are conducting it."

Attorney Fisher jumped into the argument.

"Now that remark by the attorney general," he said, "is far more unfair than anything else said here. It should be stricken out."

"I'm not going to strike out any remarks," said the judge, managing to be heard. "It is my desire to conduct this trial in a fair and orderly manner."

"I suggest," interrupted Wilentz, "that the witnesses be allowed to testify without being called names."

"Of course!" said the judge, heatedly.

"You must realize the defendant and his wife are under a high tension," put in Reilly.

Cautions Mrs. Hauptmann.

"This woman," continued the judge, "can't make outbursts like that. Don't you realize, madam [addressing Mrs. Hauptmann], the impropriety of these outbursts?"

Mrs. Hauptmann still was sobbing. She gulped and faltered out an answer to the judge.

"I'm sorry, your honor," she said, "but I just couldn't help it."

"Don't you see that it was wrong to make that outburst, Mrs. Hauptmann?" persisted the judge.

"Yes, your honor," said the woman.

"Will you promise me that you won't repeat it?"

But Mrs. Hauptmann proved stubborn.

Glares at Witness.

"I'll try to do it," she cried with an angry look at Mrs. Achenbach in the witness chair, "but sometimes I just can't help it."

"I trust that defense counsel will see that the promise is not violated," said the judge. "I believe we have a similar promise from the defendant."

"He wanted me to apologize to your honor for his talk yesterday," remarked Attorney Reilly.

"And I want the apology stricken out, too," declared the still angry Wilentz.

Mrs. Hauptmann sat down, still sobbing and trembling.

"I never took a trip," she murmured to Fisher. "It's all a lie. She's mad at me." She continued to whisper to the lawyer.

Witness Resumes Testimony.

Mrs. Achenbach, smiling broadly at all the fuss, continued her testimony.

"It was the day after the kidnaping or two days following," she repeated.

"Mrs. Hauptmann came to my front porch. She told me they had just got back from a trip."

Wilentz continued the examination.

Q.—Was Mr. Hauptmann there? A.—We were talking about ten or fifteen minutes about the trip when he came to the porch also.

Q.—Who all were there? A.—The three of us.

Q.—How did Mr. Hauptmann act? A.—He was all right while he was sitting there.

Q.—Did you observe anything? A.—She says: 'Richard hurt his leg. He sprained his ankle real bad.' And he bent down and rubbed his leg, like a slow massage.

Q.—When he went down the steps, what did he do? A.—He kind of supported himself on the side wall.

Q.—Did he walk with a limp? A.—He was limping on his left leg.

EXPECT NEW OUTBURST

Every eye in the courtroom was fastened on Mrs. Hauptmann, expecting a second outburst. She kept shaking her head in a negative gesture rapidly but said nothing aloud.

The booming voice of Reilly, who cross-examined Mrs. Achenbach, did not disturb her. She informed him, in answer to his opening questions, that Mrs. Hauptmann had worked for her from 1927 to 1928.

Q.—Did you see Hauptmann before this occasion you have told about? A.—About the first or second week in February.

Q.—When, what date? A.—I can't remember exactly.

Question Stirs Laughter.

Q.—What were you doing when they last came to your house? A.—Cleaning my bedroom.

Q.—How often do you clean your bedroom?

Both the witness and the courtroom crowd thought that was funny and she chuckled while the crowd roared.

Bruno and His Lawyer Confer

Bruno Richard Hauptmann and his attorney, Edward J. Reilly (left), in conversation at trial yesterday in Flemington, N. J.
[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

As always, Reilly became incensed by the laughter.

"I see no occasion for this laughter," he protested to the judge. "I'm trying to test the creditability of this witness, her ability to remember anything at all."

The laughter subsided and the cross-examination continued.

Q.—Did Mrs. Hauptmann take one of your children to Europe in 1928? A.—Yes, she did.

Q.—And brought the child back? A.—Yes.

Q.—She presented you with a bill for her expenses, didn't she?

Quizzed About Bill.

The witness hesitated and Attorney Reilly asked her loudly, "And you haven't paid it yet?"

The plump woman in the witness chair shook with laughter.

"O, my goodness, is that what she told you?" she inquired, giggling. "I certainly did pay that bill."

"So he had a sprained ankle, huh?" asked Reilly with heavy sarcasm. "Did you smell any arnica or see a bandage? You didn't know but that he had rheumatism or an infected foot?"

Q.—Were the steps wet? A.—It had been raining the night before.

Q.—He supported himself as he went down the steps? A.—Yes.

Q.—You hadn't given him anything to drink, had you? A.—No.

The judge ordered an adjournment at this point. He again warned the crowd against demonstrations, pointing out that he might yet order the courthouse cleared.

SESSION IN AFTERNOON

Mrs. Achenbach was on the witness stand again at the beginning of the afternoon session and Attorney Reilly tried hard to get her to admit she had a feeling of enmity towards Mrs. Hauptmann. But the witness insisted there was no reason for such an ill feeling.

Lyle, the gasoline station attendant, whose hunch in writing down Hauptmann's automobile license number led directly to the defendant's arrest, was the next witness.

"Hauptmann drove in and I asked him if I should fill up the tank," he told the jury.

"He said to give him only five gallons. When he paid me, he took an envelope from his pocket and took out a $10 gold certificate.

"I said to him, 'You don't see many like that,' and he answered, 'No, I've only got about a hundred left.' That made me take a good look at him. As he drove away I put down his license number on the bill."

There followed in rapid succession a number of police witnesses.

They told of searching the Hauptmann garage and finding the ransom money concealed there.

Detective T. W. Tobin identified the board torn from a closet in the Hauptmann home which bore the penciled address, "2974 Decatur Ave.," and "Sedg 3-7514," the address and telephone number of Dr. Condon.

Inspector Henry Bruckman who first noticed the address on the board was called.

"I showed the board to Hauptmann," he recalled. "He said he recognized it as his handwriting. He explained that he had been interested in reading about the case, and that he must have noted Dr. Condon's address and telephone number when putting some newspapers on the closet shelf."

The state then began introducing the bank accounts and brokerage accounts in the names of Hauptmann and his wife.

There was some legal squabbling between the lawyers, the defense contending that Hauptmann's wealth had no bearing on the case. Finally they withdrew their objections. Edward C. Mulligan, a customers' man for the New York brokerage house where Hauptmann traded, was put on the witness stand.

The account was carried under Mrs. Hauptmann's maiden name of Schoeffler, he testified. Mrs. Hauptmann never traded, however, he said. He added that Hauptman.. always brought cash to the account and did not write checks.

Isidor Fisch Mentioned.

The cross-examination was conducted by Reilly and the name of Isidor Fisch, the dead furrier upon whom the defense hopes to place the blame for the kidnaping, was immediately introduced.

Q.—Did you know Isidor Fisch? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you see him together with Hauptmann? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know Fisch traded through Hauptmann? A.—He couldn't do it.

Q.—Couldn't he tell Hauptmann to buy or sell and Hauptmann could do it? A.—Yes.

Harry Chrysler, a bank clerk in the Mount Vernon Trust company, testified that Hauptmann started an account there in June, 1932. His first deposit was $52, and he made other large deposits, but also large withdrawals until the bank collapsed late in 1933, he said. A feature of Hauptmann's deposits was that there were always large sums in silver coin, he said.

[This is interpreted by the state to mean that Hauptmann was busy changing ransom bank notes and naturally accumulated much silver.]

Herman Friedrichs, an official of the Central Savings bank, produced Hauptmann's account in that institution. It also was carried in the name of Schoeffler, he said, having been changed from Hauptmann in March, 1933.

Q.—What was the balance in that account at the end of 1931? A.—$77.26.

Q.—On April 1, 1932, how much was there? A.—$203.90.

[The ransom was paid April 2, 1932.]

Q.—What was the balance in March, 1933? A.—$2,528.

Q.—The name was changed from Hauptmann to Schoeffler then? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the balance at the end of 1933? A.—$5,040.85.

Q.—What was the balance on the date of his arrest last September? A.—$2,578.

Cross-examination revealed a withdrawal of $1,500 on Sept. 25 when Attorney James Fawcett was hired by Mrs. Hauptmann.

Tells of Bruno's Capture.

Detective Sergeant John Wallace of the New Jersey state police took the stand and told of Hauptmann's capture.

He and a number of other policemen and government agents went to Hauptmann's house on the morning of Sept. 19 and watched, he said. It was not until Sept. 20 that the arrest was made.

"About 9 a. m. he left his home and drove away in a Dodge sedan," Wallace testified.

"He was alone. We followed him for several miles."

Finally the following car pulled up and Hauptmann was told to pull over to the curb, the witness said. Then Hauptmann was asked to step to the sidewalk.

Ransom Bill Found.

Hauptmann was searched, the witness said, and $29 was found in his possession, among the bills a $20 Lindbergh ransom bill.

On that first day no ransom money was found, Wallace testified, but he identified a carpenter's plane found in the garage.

The defense objected, Attorney Frederick A. Pope announcing:

"There's not a bit of evidence that the ladder used by the kidnaper was built by Hauptmann," he said.

"If counsel will be a little patient," returned Wilentz, "we will show that it was built by Hauptmann. That is just what the plane is intended for."

REILLY DENIES RIFT

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, tonight denied there had been a rift between members of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's legal staf.

At a conference following today's session Reilly was asked whether any members of the legal staf had considered withdrawing from the case or whether there has been any serious disagreement within the counsel.

"Absolutely not," the Brooklyn attorney declared. "I have read some of those reports, and I can not see how they originated. There may have been differences of opinion among us, but we never indulged in personalities.

"There is absolutely no truth to reports that either Hauptmann or Mrs. Hauptmann is dissatisfied."

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard today was sworn in for his fifth seven year term on the New Jersey Supreme court bench.

J. J. Dorn, South Carolina state senator, has obtained a week's leave of absence from the senate because, he said, he has been summoned to testify at the trial. He expects to testify concerning the origin of the lumber in the kidnap ladder.

If Hauptmann is convicted, his punishment virtually will be determined by the jury. Under New Jersey practice, a first degree murder conviction with a recommendation for mercy makes mandatory the imposition of a life sentence. A conviction without such a recommendation makes mandatory the death penalty.

ENEMIES? SOMETIMES IT'S 'ED' AND 'DAVE' IN HAUPTMANN'S TRIAL

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Good friends when court is not in session, the opposing attorneys in the Hauptmann trial even in the courtroom forget sometimes that technically they are the bitterest of enemies.

Today the two chief of counsel, Edward J. Reilly for the defense and Attorney General David T. Wilentz for the state, departed from the stiff formality that usually characterizes their courtroom manner.

Reilly had just finished cross-examination of a witness. Wilentz leaned toward him:

"Is that all, Ed?"

"That's all, Dave," Reilly answered.

Yesterday Defense Counsel Frederick Pope wanted to show State Counsel Joseph Lanigan a feature of an exhibit.

"Come on over here, Joe," he said, "and I'll point it out to you."

Week-end Recess Is Taken to Speed Hauptmann Trial

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—The Hauptmann trial today was adjourned until Monday by Justice Thomas W. Trenchard at the request of lawyers for both sides. They assured him the case could be speeded up by stipulations to the testimony of a number of witnesses. The judge instructed jurors they might go on a bus ride, as they did over the last week-end, but told them not to visit any places mentioned in testimony.

John Barton Payne Taken to Hospital with Cold

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Seriously ill with a heavy cold, John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross since 1921, was taken to the George Washington hospital today on the orders of his physicians, Admiral Cary T. Grayson and Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn. Mr. Payne is 79 years old.

PHONE REFUNDS CAUSE RUSH FOR OLD DIRECTORIES

Any Chicagoans who collect old telephone directories can help Frederick Rex, librarian of the municipal reference library in the city hall. He wants all old directories he can get.

"We especially want those of the years from 1922 to 1933," Rex said. "The immediate need arises from the fact that many persons seeking their share of the $20,000,000 telephone toll refund have forgotten their old numbers and are thronging in here by the hundreds to look them up.

"We're glad to help, and we invite all others who can't remember their numbers to avail themselves of our services, but, unfortunately, some of the first visitors tore out the pages bearing their numbers to carry away as evidence. Our supply of phone books is dwindling, and we need all the extra ones we can find."

Angry Vandal Hurls Paint at Portrait in Paris Salon

PARIS, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Some one's temper was aroused today by the sight of a portrait of the black bearded Eugene Frot in the salon of the independent artists. Who ever it was threw a pot of paint at the portrait so vigorously that three other pictures were spattered. The paint thrower disappeared. Frot was minister of the interior in the cabinet of former Premier Daladier early last year, and was blamed by his opponents for the shooting during the Stavisky riots Feb. 6.

necessary approval of the governments of the dominions as well as the final consent of the full British government. The postoffice is drafting the plans. The postoffice counts on winning over the cabinet's approval by showing how orders for new and speedier airplanes would give a spur to industry.

Victory in the London to Melbourne air race, plus a certain degree of envy of the Dutch for taking second place with a stock airliner, is the reason behind the postoffice's desire to increase the air mail service to the point where soon all first class mail will be carried by airplane between England and other parts of the British empire.

Seek Permit from France.

There is a strong probability that a daily service to India and to Africa will be started even before 1936, as the British government is speeding the removal of obstacles such as French and Italian unwillingness to have foreign airplanes fly over their territories. France had refused to permit English commercial air lines to operate south of Paris, but recently negotiations for use of a route eastward via Paris and Marseilles were concluded with the French government.

Italy had objected to airplanes coming from France flying over Italian territory, but a few days before the British negotiations with the French were closed the Italian government ratified an accord removing its restrictions.

As far as safety in the air is concerned, 1934 was an excellent year for British military and civil aviation. Pilots of the Royal Air Force flew 47,000,000 miles, and there were only 31 deaths in 20 fatal accidents, as against 45,000,000 miles and 54 deaths in 39 fatal accidents in 1933.

MRS. ANNA DALL, JOHN BOETTIGER WED IN NEW YORK

Announcement Made by President and Wife.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Roosevelt today announced the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, to John Boettiger, former assistant Washington correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The announcement came from the White House a half hour after the simple ceremony was performed in the Roosevelt town house in New York. It was delivered as the couple was bound for an undisclosed destination on a short honeymoon with full parental blessing.

Great secrecy surrounded the ceremony which brought to fruition Washington's most talked of romance. Rumors of the attachment between the President's beautiful and popular blonde daughter and the former newspaper man had been current for more than a year.

Secrecy Plea Respected.

The White House had persistently declined to comment on the romance even when reports were revived with increased force with Boettiger's resignation from THE TRIBUNE staf three weeks ago to take a post as assistant to Will Hays of the Motion Picture Distributors and Producers' association. Before that time the approaching marriage was known to THE TRIBUNE, which preserved the secret at Boettiger's request.

The ceremony was performed by Judge Frederic Kernochan of the Court of General Session, a friend of the Roosevelt family, in the spacious, high ceiling library of the home. A marriage license was procured an hour earlier at 8 o'clock in the morning, from a deputy city clerk, who was summoned to the home with a blank license.

Mrs. Roosevelt Present.

Only members of the immediate family of the bride were present. These were Mrs. Roosevelt, the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt; James Roosevelt and his wife, Elliott Roosevelt and his wife, and the President's youngest son, John.

Mrs. Roosevelt came to New York by midnight train last night. She left the White House, where she was hostess at a formal reception to the judiciary, to catch the train. A few guests marked the absence of Mrs. Dall at the reception, but none guessed from the mother's calm and gracious manner that an important family event was but a few hours away.

The ceremony was that commonly performed by the city clerk. At its conclusion the couple were congratulated by telephone by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt sped them off with her blessings.

Leave for Honeymoon.

The couple left in Boettiger's automobile. Later Mrs. Roosevelt told reporters she had no more idea where they went "than the man in the moon." She said she expected that they would return Monday or Tuesday and plan to live in New York.

Asked if she were surprised, Mrs. Roosevelt said: "No. Are mothers usually surprised?" She was unable to describe accurately what her daughter wore, but appeared to be quite possessed after the event.

"A suit," she said. "Yes, it was a suit, because I remember she wore a skirt and a blouse. I couldn't tell you what color."

Mr. Boettiger, a native Chicagoan, began his newspaper career with the City News bureau in Chicago two years after the war, during which he served in the navy. He served on the staf of the Chicago Evening American in 1922 and went to THE TRIBUNE in 1923 and served on its staf continuously until three weeks ago.

On the day President Roosevelt thanked the Democratic convention in Chicago for his nomination as their candidate, Boettiger was assigned to cover his activities. In the field of national politics he scored initial success.

He accompanied the President through the campaign, which was interspersed with coverage from Albany, where Roosevelt sat in the governor's chair of the state of New York. On this assignment he met Mrs. Dall, the vibrantly young daughter of the President, and his favorite child.

Mrs. Dall was an immediate favorite among the news men, who gave her the name of "Princess Anna." In the innumerable parties given the candidate and his family and accompanying newspaper men Boettiger often acted as her escort, first giving rise to the reports of the romance.

The campaign closed, Boettiger was assigned to cover the President elect, and with the inauguration he was made assistant chief of the Washington bureau. The promotion was earned by his striking and able performance of his tasks.

Widely Known in Capital.

Within a few weeks Boettiger became one of the best known news men in the capital. His acquaintanceship in recognition of his ability was one of the largest among the many newspaper men of the city.

He and Mrs. Dall were frequently seen together in Washington, usually alone and engrossed in conversation. He was a frequent guest at the White House.

In 1933 Mrs. Dall became estranged from her husband, Curtis Dall. They were married in 1926. Last July 31 she secured a Reno divorce. Four months earlier Boettiger secured a divorce in Chicago.

FORMER HUSBAND HERE.

Curtis B. Dall, former husband of Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall Boettiger, told reporters yesterday that John Boettiger, who married the former Mrs. Dall, is a "very nice chap."

Dall, who was attending the national conference of state liquor administrators at the Hotel Sherman, was apparently nervous as he discussed the wedding of his former wife.

He revealed that he had sent the following telegram to the newly married couple: "Received your telegram here. I am sending to you both my every good wish."

MOTHER OF DRUGGAN IS REFUSED WRIT IN FARM EVICTION FIGHT

Mrs. Elizabeth Druggan, mother of Terry Druggan, former beer runner, lost a prelimintry court skirmish yesterday to block her eviction from the 240 acre farm near Lake Zurich that Terry bought in 1923.

Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady of Lake county, who heard the case in Waukegan, dismissed her bill for injunction to restrain the Pick estate, original owners of the farm, from carrying out its threat of bringing forcible entry detainer proceedings against her. Judge Daly ruled the petition was faulty, and allowed A. V. Smith, attorney for Mrs. Druggan, ten days to file an amended bill.

Smith said Druggan bought the farm for $80,000 in 1923, paying $40,000 down. Later, after making other payments, he transferred title to his mother, Smith said. Smith said only $20,000 remains unpaid.

2 BROTHERS GET PRISON TERMS IN HIJACKING CASE

Federal Judge William H. Holly yesterday sentenced two brothers to Leavenworth penitentiary after they had pleaded guilty to charges of stealing $2,000 worth of butter from interstate truck shipments. They are Anthony Vercillo, 29 years old, 124 21st avenue, Melrose Park, who got a sentence of five years; and Joseph Vercillo, 23 years old, whose sentence is three years.

Both were arrested several months ago as members of a hijacking gang which seized a truck belonging to Swift & Co. while it was en route from Chicago to the Swift plant in Detroit. The theft occurred just across the Indiana state line. The truck and its cargo were recovered.

WIDOW OF SLAIN ELI DAICHES SUES FOUR FOR $60,000

Mrs. Belle T. Daiches, widow of Eli Daiches, advertising executive, who was slain March 3, filed two suits totaling $60,000 in the Circuit court yesterday against four men, three of whom are under indictment for murder in the case.

One suit, seeking $50,000, is directed against Irving Weitzman, south side bakery executive, Arthur Emblem, and Louis J. Weitzman of New York, brother of Irving and chairman of the board of the Thomas M. Bowers Advertising agency, of which Weitzman was vice president. The suit asks the money as damages for a beating given Daiches in his office on Jan. 24, 1933.

The second suit seeks $10,000 of Louis and Irving Weitzman and Walter Murphy, on the ground that they conspired in Daiches' death. Under the law damages for a death are limited to $10,000. All except Louis Weitzman are under indictment.

Emblem has confessed that it was he who beat Daiches in his office in an effort to kill him at Irving Weitzman's order. Murphy and Emblem have asserted they were present when Jerry Pilot, now dead, shot and killed Daiches as he was leaving his apartment in the Sherry hotel, 1725 East 53d street.

150 RESCUED AS SHIP HITS ROCK IN SNOWSTORM

Survivors Tell Thrilling Tales of Heroism.

CHEFOO, Shantung Province, China, Jan. 18.—(AP)—The daring rescue of all but one of the 151 persons aboard the wrecked Japanese steamer Hayataka Maru by the Japanese destroyer Haki was disclosed today.

Survivors arrived here aboard the Kyodo Maru, also a Japanese vessel, with the story of heroism at sea.

During high seas and a heavy snowstorm early Wednesday near Weihaiwei, China, the Hayataka Maru struck a rock and a gaping hole appeared in its side. The captain grounded the vessel on the beach to prevent its sinking.

S O S messages brought the Kyodo Maru alongside, but its crew was unable to effect a rescue. Later the Haki arrived and its sailors with great bravery took off all the passengers and crew except one elderly man, who fell into the sea.

Twenty-eight Saved; Captain Dies.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Capt. Duncan Milne, last to leave the stranded British freighter Kenkerry today after it was split in two by the pounding waves on Black Rock point, drowned after his crew of twenty-eight had been carried to safety.

The master, whose craft piled up on the treacherous ledge last night in a blinding snowstorm, remained at the bridge after the fishermen of Portuguese Cove had removed the ship's company with a breeches buoy.

Shortly after dawn the listing steamer split, but the line still held and Chief Engineer Dove, who had remained with the captain, was rescued. The master was fifty yards away from the ship and near rescue, when a huge wave plucked him from the breeches buoy and he was swallowed in the churning seas.

Danish Ship Safe After Fire.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Jan. 18.—(AP)—The Danish steamer Astra, 1,407-ton vessel carrying coal from Manchester to Glasgow, advised its owners this evening that fire in its after hold had been extinguished after six hours and there appeared to be no further danger. Its crew of 22, it advised, is remaining on board, although the steamer Lars Kruse was standing by.

CITY'S CRIME IS CUT 22 PER CENT IN YEAR, SURVEY DISCLOSES

There was a 22 per cent decrease in the number of crimes in Chicago last year as compared with 1933, Police Commissioner Allman reported yesterday to Mayor Kelly.

Fifty-five per cent fewer automobiles were stolen in 1934 than in 1933, the report said. The number of automobiles stolen has been decreasing steadily during the last two years, Commissioner Allman pointed out. In 1932 the total was 33,282, in 1933 the number had decreased to 26,660, and last year the total was 11,934.

The number of robberies dropped 11.6 per cent as compared with 1933 and 16 per cent as compared to the 1932 figures. Burglary decreased 5.6 per cent from 1933 totals, and larceny dropped 12.7 per cent.

There were 13.4 per cent fewer murders in 1934 than in 1933, the report showed, and all other crimes decreased 9.4 per cent as compared with 1933 and 16.5 per cent as compared to 1932 totals.

MOLEY ANALYZES NEW DEAL, CALLS IT CONSERVATIVE

Not Building New System, Commercial Club Told.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The recovery program of the Roosevelt administration was analyzed last night by Raymond Moley, editor and adviser to the President, in an address before the Commercial club of Chicago at the Blackstone hotel.

The ultimate objective of the entire recovery effort, he said, is "improving and repairing and making humanly tolerable the old system; we are not building a new one."

A greatly improved state of public opinion has developed in the last few months, Mr. Moley told the Chicago business leaders.

Revival of Private Enterprise.

"Private enterprise has begun to move," he declared. "People are spending money with more confidence. The prospects of reducing government expenditures become progressively brighter as private enterprise revives.

"The United States has cast its lot on the side of the maintenance of its traditional democracy in political life and the profit and loss system in economic life. Despite pessimists of the right and pessimists of the left, I sincerely believe that the wisdom of its choice will be manifested in the months to come.

"Nevertheless, while the signs are hopeful, the progress of recovery is not going to be a completely triumphant sweep. A spirit of immediate self-reliance is wholly desirable as a means of lifting us out of unreasonable gloom. But the facts must not be forgotten. These facts reveal many points on which there will be disagreement, many matters in which decisions must and will be made by the government which may not be wholly to the liking of business.

Makes Plea for Tolerance.

Coöperation should be the watchword of the next few months, but tolerance and understanding on both sides should be the spirit in which coöperation is attempted. Tolerance is the handmaiden of liberalism and liberalism is the hope of America."

He characterized the New Deal as basically "an effort to save capitalism, and, by spreading the range of opportunity under it, to enable the average man to regain a measure of control over the conditions under which he lives." By no stretch of the imagination, he declared, could the vote of November, 1932, have been interpreted as a mandate for the abandonment of the capitalistic system and the substitution of another.

He held up the public utility holding company, with particular reference to the Insull régime, as an example of the limitations of large scale operation.

Insull as Public Benefactor.

"Mr. Insull in his pioneer days was a great utility operator," he said. "He gave to the public the benefit of genuine administrative genius. I need not tell a Chicago audience that he served a great social as well as an economic function in spreading the use of electricity by making it cheap and efficient. And his first use of the holding company form to coördinate the operations of related properties no doubt contributed to his operating achievements.

"But it is not clear that the same operating results could not have been achieved through the use of less dangerous corporate forms. If the holding company has gone wrong, it is important to inquire why it went wrong.

"It was used not to achieve operating economies, financial stability or reduced costs, but to give control of vast properties to men who not only had a rather insignificant stake in their ownership, but to men whose interests became too numerous for any human to administer.

Sees No Premeditated Wrong.

"I am not in agreement with those who view the sordid history of some of these holding companies as deliberate, premeditated wrong. It is much more reasonable to view their acts as excited and desperate efforts to escape from the doom threatened in the ancient prophet's warnings against the pride of mortal man.

"The inevitable legislation with respect to these holding company systems is merely a recognition of a breakdown that has already come from within, a breakdown that signifies what may be termed the downfall of private socialism in America. By private socialism I mean the conception of private enterprise born in the socialistic days of twenty-five years ago. It arose from a concept, entertained by masters of capitalism and masters of the soap box alike, that no aggregation of other people's property could be so large as to be beyond the control of concentrated and centralized management.

"Could the entire utility industry have been effectively managed in the way these empire builders believed, inevitably, the power of these men, too great to be controled by any normal regulatory device and too great to be possessed by any private group, would have passed to the state. Then, the socialism that they dreaded in theory but subscribed to in fact would have emerged triumphant to mock them."

Finds Congress "a Good Group."

Mr. Moley reassured the business men as to the character of the 74th congress. The majority, he said, is more overwhelmingly Democratic than the 73d congress, "but it is not overwhelming more radical." An examination of the house, he said, yields the impression of "a good group of public officials, somewhat better than the average of the house, certainly not predominantly radical."

A concensus of the more important and accurate news services conveys the impression, he stated, that none of the following measures will become law: the Townsend old age pension plan, the pay-off of depositors in closed banks, the proposal to refinance farms with greenbacks, a new central bank, the free coinage of silver, and the present proposal for a 30 hour week.

Praises Chicago Law Enforcement.

Mr. Moley spoke of the reconstruction of law enforcement agencies and his own efforts along this line.

"When I look back at the situation disclosed in that investigation," he said, "and contemplate the present picture in Chicago, I am moved by the utmost admiration and respect for the energy and public spirit of the people of this community."

Head of Sanitary District Reports to Taxpayers

Ross A. Woodhull, president of the sanitary district, yesterday made public the first of the periodic fiscal statements which all of the major local governments are now preparing for the information of taxpayers.

The sanitary district statements give a complete, but condensed picture of the financial operations of the district during the year recently ended, and a summary of the district's debts at the end of the year. The manner in which the district financed its ordinary operations is shown by the statement of income and expenditure of its corporate fund, which follows:

INCOME.
Cash on hand, Jan. 1, 1934		$ 99,464
Delinquent taxes received	$1,031,187
Less tax warants redeemed (principal)	360,339
		670,848
Available for expenditures
Current taxes received (1932-'33 levies)	2,542,122
Less tax warants redeemed (principal)	2,484,122
Available for expenditure		57,897
Miscellaneous revenue		655,180
Sale of tax warants:
To public	2,773,100
To own funds	357,700
Total new borrowings		3,130,800
Total income		$4,614,198
EXPENDITURES.
Interest paid on tax warants		$ 263,743
Salaries and wages		2,511,610
Operating costs other than salaries		1,287,570
Judgments, claims and refunds paid		3,324
Interest coupons paid		200,826
Repaid to other accounts in adjustment		32,577
Total expenditures		$4,308,650
Cash on hand, Dec. 31, 1934		305,548

Inspection of the income statement shows that because of the delay in Cook county tax collections, caused originally by the 1928 reassessment, the sanitary district, in common with other governments, had to finance nearly three-quarters of its 1934 operations by borrowing on the security of future tax levies.

The statement of expenditures discloses part of the cost of these borrowings, in the payment of $263,743 in interest on tax warants redeemed during the year. Taking into account the second item of bond interest paid out of operating revenue, the district spent 11 per cent of revenue ordinarily earmarked for running its physical plant on interest last year. Deduction of these interest payments leaves its actual operating expenditures at $3,835,081.

In addition to operating expenditures, the district had on hand or received during the year in its bond and interest fund $11,656,911. Of this, $4,906,700 was paid out in interest on its bonds and $5,549,945 used to redeem bonds previously defaulted. A balance of $1,200,265 in the fund at the end of the year has been largely used since Jan. 1 on interest payments.

The complete statement of the district's debts on Dec. 31, 1934, is as follows:

Bonds not in default		$126,907,500
Bonds in default	$16,512,555
Less cash in sinking fund	750,418
		15,762,137
Interest coupons in default	2,932,635
Accrued interest on defaulted bonds	1,344,073
Accrued interest on defaulted interest coupons	47,939
	$ 4324,647
Less cash in sinking fund	449,847
		3,874,800
Total funded debt obligations		$146,544,437

Tax warants outstanding:

Year.	Held by public.	In own funds.
1930		$136,360
1932	$ 346,900	286,000
1933	1,740,700	359,100
*1934	1,170,000	815,000
Total tax warants		*4,854,060
Floating debt:
Unpaid bills	$ 590,000
Unpaid salaries	10,000
Judgments	3,000
	$ 603,000
Less cash on hand	305,548
Net floating debt		297,452
Total, all debts		$151,696,949

*This includes $12,025 in 1932 and 1933 tax warants for redemption of which a cash reserve was available at the end of the year.

In releasing the statements Mr. Woodhull announced that the district will pay all bills for which vouchers have been approved, amounting to about $365,000, within the next ten days. He also stated that on is 1935 tax warants, of which it plans to sell $2,400,000 to the public, the district expects to reduce the interest rate from its present level of 5 per cent to 4½ per cent, which will save more than $20,000 during the period of nearly two years before tax collections are available to redeem the warants.

CONGRESS MAY BOOST SECURITY PLAN PAYMENTS

Many Proposals Treble U. S. Outlay.

with sales of 100 million dollars annually would have a pay roll of about 18 million dollars. However, of this more than 7 per cent goes to the executive and buying staf, who would not come under the provisions of the law, so that actual pay rolls to be taxed would probably be about 10 per cent to 11 per cent of sales, or 10 million dollars, which would mean a tax of $100,000 in 1936. On a volume of about 20 million dollars, which is the average for the individual large metropolitan store, tax would be $20,000.

Steel Industry Levy.

On the basis of an estimated pay roll of at least 456 million dollars to steel employés in 1934, the old age and unemployment taxes on pay rolls would cost the companies in excess of 5 million dollars a year were the maximum levy in effect. This does not take into account the exemptions among nonmanual workers receiving more than $250 a month, because a segregation cannot be made from the statistics at hand.

It is significant that these taxes would jump sharply by the end of 1938. A 1 per cent tax for unemployment insurance, which would become effective Jan. 1, 1936, would cost the industry $4,560,000. In 1937, with the addition of ½ of 1 per cent contribution by the companies toward pensions, the cost would be $6,840,000. However, in 1938, with an unemployment insurance tax of 3 per cent, and another of ½ of 1 per cent for old age pensions, the cost to the steelmakers would amount to $15,960,000.

Amount Progresses Upward.

The measure provides that by 1957, with the graduated increase every five years, the companies would be paying 2½ per cent for old age pensions and a similar tax would be taken from the envelopes of the workers. By that time the contributions from the companies for old age would reach a total of $11,400,000 per year, while the unemployment insurance levy would be $13,680,000 a year.

Thus, based on a pay roll no larger than the 456 million dollars estimated for the past year, there would be a total tax, when the highest rates are in effect, of $36,480,000 a year, of which the companies would contribute $25,080,000, or 68.7 per cent, while the workers would pay $11,400,000, or 31.3 per cent.

Steel trade conditions last year were not good, with the exception of the three months ended June 30. Thus any improvement in demand in the future will steadily increase the tax burden of the steel companies. It is evident that with more normal business conditions and an increase in demand, therefore, the taxes could mount to more than double those which would have been payable until the 1934 pay rolls.

COURT SAVES POLICE WRESTLING CHAMPION FROM 'CRUEL' WIFE

Policeman Albert Haake, 240 pound wrestling champion of the Rogers Park station, gained court protection from his 135 pound wife, Marie, yesterday.

Haake, who is 40 years old and lives at 5042 Winthrop avenue, through his attorney, Harry X. Cole, sued his wife for divorce in the Superior court, charging cruelty. His bill sets forth that she tossed him about at the station in front of other policemen on Sept. 17, 1933, bruising his body and his pride as a wrestler. At other times, the bill relates, she choked him, punched him in the jaw, and bounced dishes off his head.

On the plea of Attorney Cole Judge Rudolph F. Desort enjoined Mrs. Haake from doing further violence to her husband. Mrs. Haake has lived at 3451 Irving Park boulevard since the couple separated last Jan. 8. They were married Sept. 6, 1914.

CATHOLIC 8 DAY CHURCH UNITY SERVICE OPENS

Prayer Dedicated to Ideal of "One Fold."

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Worldwide devotion of the Catholic church to the ideal of church unity came to a focus in Chicago last night in the first service of an octave, or eight day, dedication of prayer and special services to that end. The opening service of the octave, which is being observed at Holy Name cathedral, was conducted by the Rev. Edward V. Daily of the cathedral staf. His address was on the theme of "The return of all the other sheep to the one fold of St. Peter, the one shepherd."

THE REV. REYNOLD HILLENBRAND.

The octave for church unity is concurrent with that of the feast of St. Peter's chair at Rome, and will close with the feast of the conversion of St. Paul next Friday. Announcements from the cathedral said that this is the first time the octave for church unity has been observed in the central west.

Worldwide Interest Noted.

While the whole Christian world is observed to be more interested in church unity in recent years than perhaps at any other time in all Christian history, the program of the Holy Name octave is pointed out as being unique amond widespread efforts to achieve some form of unity.

The topic of tonight's prayers and address will be what historians call "the great schism," the separation of the eastern or Greek orthodox churches from western or Roman Christianity. The speaker will be the Rev. Reynold Hillenbrand, authority on oriental Christianity and member of the diocesan mission board.

Rev. Gregory Cloos to Speak.

The other great communion besides the Roman Catholic and Greek Orthodox which claims historical orders dating from Apostolic times, the Anglican, will be the subject tomorrow night. The speaker will be the Rev. Gregory Cloos of Joliet, former spiritual director of the Holy Name Converts' league.

Other leaders during next week will be the Rev. James Magner of Quigley seminary, the Rev. John M. Sullivan of St. Mary's Paulist church, the Rev. William Cousins, the Rev. Arthur B. Klyber and the Most Rev. William D. O'Brien, auxiliary bishop of Chicago, who will bring the octave to a close.

HORNER DESIGNATES TOMORROW DAY OF ZIONIST OBSERVANCE

Gov. Horner yesterday issued a proclamation designating tomorrow as Palestine day throughout the state. The proclamation is in line with action already taken by other state executives in connection with Zionist activities. Gov. Horner's statement was made public by Max Shulman, president of the Chicago Zionist organization. It said:

"What has been transpiring in Palestine owes an incalculable debt of gratitude to the statesmen and citizens of Christian faith of this as well as of other lands who have looked with sympathy and encouragement upon the Palestinian effort. The observance of Palestine day on Jan. 20 provides an opportunity for those interested to review the significance of Palestine as a haven and a homeland for those Jews throughout the world who seek its advantages, and gain the reaffirmation of the ideals of those whose enthusiasm and sacrifice have made it possible."

Chicago's observance of Palestine day, under chairmanship of Oscar S. Caplan of the Probate court, will come to a climax tomorrow night at a mass-meeting in the Auditorium theater.

CONGREGATIONAL PARLEY

Official members of the Congregational-Christian churches of the country began arriving in Chicago yesterday for a week's session of the national executive conference of that communion. Sessions of the conference, to be held beginning Monday at the First Congregational church, Evanston, had a prelude last night in the opening of the council of state superintendents of the united churches at the Hotel La Salle.

The superintendents' sessions are in the charge of the Rev. Claton S. Rice of Seattle, president of the council. Chicago Congregationalists, under the plans of the executive conference, are offered a series of three platform meetings at the Evanstotn church on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. At those meetings the main goals of the denominations for 1935 will be discussed. Dr. Jay T. Stocking of St. Louis, moderator of the general council, will formally open the conference Monday night.

METHODISTS TO MEET

Nearly 3,000 officials of 140 Methodist Episcopal churches of Chicago and suburbs will meet at an inspirational session tomorrow afternoon at the Chicago temple, 77 West Washington street. In making this announcement, Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf of the Chicago area, said that the meeting had been sought by laymen in order further to develop fraternal relationships between leaders of local churches.

He declared tomorrow's meeting to be the symbol of the greatest step forward since he became head of this area of the church more than two years ago.

SENTENCED TO BRIDEWELL.

Raymond Jackson, 31 years old, 543 Madison street, was sentenced to three months in the Bridewell yesterday by Judge Joseph A. Graber on a charge of stealing a suit of clothes out of a parked automobile near 63d and Halsted streets.

CONVICT IS FREED, BUT IT MAY COST HIS LAWYER JAIL

Lofton Called to Court Over Wheaton Writ.

Milton Panateles, who was sent to the Joliet penitentiary two and a half years ago for robbery, was given his freedom yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus by Judge Max Allaben of the Circuit court of Du Page county in Wheaton.

For winning Panateles' liberation, however, his attorney, Joseph B. Lofton, 77 West Washington street, may have to go to jail. Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Cook county Criminal court ordered the attorney to appear before him on Monday and show cause why he should not be held guilty of contempt.

Head of Bar Committee.

Earlier in the week Judge Sullivan had referred to Lofton's action in going before Judge Allaben for the writ as "smacking of shyster tactics." Lofton is head of the Chicago Bar association committee for the defense of prisoners without funds and it has been announced the association is making an investigation of the Panateles case.

Panateles was convicted before Judge Harry M. Fisher in the Criminal court here in 1932 and sentenced then. Later his legal representatives asked for a new trial, alleging the discovery of new evidence. The case fell under the jurisdiction of Judge Joseph B. David, who dismissed the petition for a new trial.

Overrides Judge's Instruction.

Recently Attorney Lofton appeared before Chief Justice Sullivan and requested that he issue a writ of habeas corpus for the prisoner. The judge refused to do so and instructed Lofton to appeal in his client's behalf to the Supreme court of Illinois.

Instead of following the instructions, Attorney Lofton went to Wheaton and requested a writ from Judge Allaben. Panateles was taken from the prison to the Wheaton jail, where he remained until the hearing and his release yesterday.

Cook county prosecutors said the order in Du Page county would prevent any further prosecution of Panateles. If the orders of Judge Sullivan to the attorney had been followed the best the prisoner could have obtained was a new trial.

DAIRY DRIVER IS FINED.

Nicholas Kost, 20 years old, 3513 North Claremont avenue, a dairy driver, was fined $25 by Judge Joseph H. McGarry in Town Hall court yesterday for using license plates on his truck that had been issued to the person from whom he purchased the vehicle.

DAUGHTER OF RICH DIXIE FAMILY WEDS AFTER 1 DAY WOOING

New York, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Loranda Piccio—she who was a Batchelder of New Orleans—has been married since Monday, it was made known today by her mother, Mrs. Julie O'Neill Batchelder.

The bridegroom is Loper B. Laidlaw, described as an old friend of the family. Mrs. Batchelder said they eloped to Harrison, N. Y., last Monday and now are on a honeymoon.

They met only last Sunday at Mrs. Batchelder's for the first time in 15 years.

The new Mrs. Laidlaw formerly was the wife of Gen. Pere Ruggerio Piccio, a member of the Royal Italian air force. The marriage was annulled at Rome.

Mrs. Laidlaw's father was the late David James Batchelder, wealthy lumberman of Chicago and New Orleans.

HIT VANDENBERG IN WORLD COURT SENATE DEBATE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], who favors a limited adherence to the world court, became a target for the sharpshooters of both sides today when he addressed the senate on behalf of his amendment on foreign entanglements.

Senator Vandenberg's resolution aims to preserve America's traditional policy of staying out of foreign political entnaglements and keeping other nations out of purely American affairs.

At the same time Mr. Vandenberg was hard put to answer a question propounded by Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho], arch foe of the world court in any form.

"I understand the senator to say that adherence to the court would not mean the sacrifice of our traditional policies," said Senator Borah, with a grin on his face. "If that is correct, why is his amendment necessary?"

"There is a difference," said Senator Vandenberg, "between an affirmative assertion and an affirmative rejection of our right. It is true that I do not believe the resolution of adherence jeopardizes our traditional policy, but I also believe that an affirmative rejection of this amendment simply invites an implication which no senator would care to raise."

The amendment was voted down in the foreign relations committee, 11 to 9, at the suggestion of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, the administration leader.

Fire Razes Atlanta Depot Built Before Civil War

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 19 (Saturday).—(AP)—Flames believed by firemen to have started from an explosion early today destroyed the old Georgia railroad depot and warehouse, one of the landmarks of Atlanta. The loss is estimated at more than $100,000. The building formed a portion of the Atlanta joint terminals. More than 50 carloads of freight were in the warehouse. The old depot building was built before the civil war.

REYNOLDS CASE COUNTER ATTACK MADE FOR BABY

Charges First Wife Knew Divorce Was Legal.

Winston Salem N. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith's attack on the legitimacy of Baby Christopher Smith Reynolds, posthumous son of the late Smith Reynolds, was answered today with a scathing challenge of her good faith in raising the question.

The accusation made by Mrs. Smith, Reynolds' first wife and herself a textile fortune heiress, was filed in Superior court several weeks ago in response to a proposed distribution of the Reynolds' tobacco fortune estimated at 30 million dollars.

Mrs. Smith sought to bar Baby Christopher from sharing in the estate on the ground that her own Reno, Nev., divorce from Reynolds was illegal, Reynolds' subsequent marriage to Libby Holman, former Broadway torch singer, being therefore void and their infant son consequently having no rights of inheritance.

Says Actions Proved Knowledge.

Today little Christopher's legal "next friend," R. C. Vaughn, filed an answer to that challenge. His petition said that not only did Mrs. Smith know of her own knowledge that her divorce was valid, "but she has demonstrated she is aware of it through her various acts and has so acknowledged through sundry papers filed in this and other court litigation."

Mrs. Smith had asserted that Reynolds arranged for her divorce from him and, although still loving her husband, she agreed to it at a time when she was ill. But Baby Christopher's reply painted an altogether different picture.

It was actually Mrs. Smith and not Reynolds who instigated the divorce and she accepted, apparently in good faith, all the benefits of it, today's petition stated. It added that while Reynolds was still alive she married F. Brandon Smith Jr. of Charlotte and lived with him for two years. She divorced him early last year.

Separate After Two Weeks.

Reynolds lived with his first wife only two weeks following their marriage in the fall of 1929 in York, S. C., at 2 a. m. The ceremony was performed after a midnight drive from her home in Concord, N. C., in which she was accompanied by her father, J. F. Cannon of the wealthy Cannon towel family, and his chauffeur.

At the end of two weeks, Christopher's response stated, Reynolds separated from his bride and refused to contribute to her support. Following not lived in the state five consecutive [illegible] it said, Reynolds refused to contribute to her support.

Six days after Mrs. Smith obtained her Reno divorce in November, 1931, Reynolds married Miss Holman.

SEIZE ACTOR CHARGED WITH ASSAULT ON 'MORALS' WITNESS

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Seymour Shindell, 27, movie actor, was arrested today on charges of assault with a deadly weapon on B. H. [Pat] Harmon, another actor, who is a prosecution witness in the "Hollywood morals" case against Dave Allen, former head of the Central Casting corporation, and Gloria March, actress.

Shindell's bail was fixed at $3,000. Warants for him and two other men still sought were issued as the result of two fights Wednesday night in which Harmon said he was severely beaten with a piece of gas pipe.

Deputy District Attorney Arthur Veitch said the prosecutor's office has evidence actor friends of Allen "have conspired to obtain revenge" on Harmon for testifying. The first trial resulted in a jury disagreement and a second is set for March 11.

TWO ARRESTED ON CHARGES OF BOND SWINDLE

Two men, alleged to have operated confidence games throughout northern Illinois, dealing mainly in municipal and real estate bonds, were captured last night by state's attorney's police on warants furnished by Sherif Arthur Bennett of Du Page county.

The men, Ralph Becker, 36 years old, 1232 Jarvis avenue, and Kendall Cowger, 26 years old, 5559 Magnolia avenue, were taken into custody at the Rogers Park hotel, 6805 Sheridan road.

According to Sherif Bennett, the men chose mostly elderly persons, unversed in finance, and represented themselves as bond experts, offering to "double your money." They would take the bonds and give a real estate deed as security. It would not be until some days later that the victim found the deed was for worthless land.

Complainants named in the warants were Mrs. Annie Graf of Wheaton, wife of a cripple, and Mrs. Catherine Eleck. Mrs. Graf says she lost $1,000 in city of Wheaton bonds and Mrs. Eleck $3,500 in bonds of apartment buildings.

Both Becker and Cowger are under indictment in Du Page county in connection with these two cases, and their total bonds were set at $8,500 each.

Alleged Disorderly House on East Oak St. Raided

Sergt. Thomas Harrison of the Chicago avenue police and his squad raided an alleged disorderly resort at 65 East Oak street early today. Six men and six women were arrested. Jane Kelly, 60 years old, was charged with selling liquor without a license and with keeping a disorderly resort. The others were charged with being inmates. Sergt. Harrison said that numerous complaints had been received concerning the resort, which was a handsomely furnished eight room apartment.

PMA PRESIDENT OUSTED BY HIS OWN DISTRICT

Members of the district " organization of the Pure Milk association yesterday voted, 677 to 440, to oust Henry A. Pfister as a director of the organization. William J. Swayer, Lake county farmer, was elected to the post. Pfister is president of the association, which has 18,000 farmer members, and his removal as a director will prevent his being a candidate for the presidency when his term expires in March.

Further opposition to the present management of the association developed at the meeting. Swayer was instructed to vote, at the annual meeting, for the removal of Don N. Geyer as association manager, and of A. M. Krahl as editor of Milk News, the official publication. Statements by those present at the district meeting indicated that the farmer members were dissatisfied with Geyer's handling of the milk strike last spring.

Pfister, who has been president for two years, resides at Prairie View. It was reported that he intended to contest the election of Swayer as a director. The seventh district includes all of Lake county, the northwestern part of Cook county, and a section in Kenosha county, Wis.

INDICTED ON FRAUD COUNT.

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Perry A. Poorman of Bloomington was under arrest today in Springfield on an indictment charging use of the mails to defraud. He is charged with having defrauded the Saylor Tie and Lumber company, of which he was purchasing agent, of $19,000.

ASSERT AIR MAIL RATES REVISION PLAN IS 'NO HELP'

Major Lines Contend ICC Leaves Situation Same.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

The recommended revisions in air mail carrying rates made public last Tuesday by the interstate commerce commission's air mail committee offer no aid in the solution of the financial problems besetting every major air line. This was the statement made yesterday by officials of the lines which have offices in Chicago.

The proposed revisions, the executives said, are important from only one standpoint. This is the public acknowledgment by the I. C. C. committeemen that it is unjust to expect certain of the air lines to continue to carry air mail at the extremely low rates bid after the fiasco of last spring when prior contracts were abrogated.

Grasped at "Last Resort."

Those "starvation" rates, the operators said, were acceptable to the air lines at the time only as a last resort to protect pioneering work done along their routes. The contracts were accepted in the belief that future legislation would readjust the rate of pay to levels commensurate with actual operation costs.

The I. C. C. rate revisions, according to the air line cost accountants, do not set up "fair and reasonable" rates. The flat rates based upon a 300 pound mail load as set up in the proposals of the committee, would help only a few of the smaller lines which carry small percentages of the total air mail load.

Under the I. C. C. proposals operators would receive pay increases each time the monthly average load increased 100 pounds over the base load. Thus if an operator received a base pay of 31 cents a mile for carrying 300 pounds, he would receive 34 1-3 cents a mile for carrying 400 pounds.

Cite Lines' Perilous Condition.

Cost accountants of several of the lines charged yesterday that this system was "merely a complicated way of leaving the rates of pay for the major lines exactly where they are today." And the position occupied by all the large companies, the accountants continued, is a perilous one because losses have been averaging between $150,000 and $200,000 per month since February.

Several operators charged that the I. C. C. committee had made public its report in an attempt to influence the President's national aviation commission, headed by Clark Howell, which also is making a comprehensive study of air transportation costs and fair rates of pay. The Howell commission's report, according to dispatches from Washington, was placed in the hands of President Roosevelt last evening.

"Every one in aviation hopes and believes that the Howell commission will ask for establishment of a permanent aviation commission which will take over supervision of all phases of civil flying. The consensus is that if the commission asks for this action President Roosevelt will grant it," one air line official said.

Question Jurisdiction of I. C. C.

"The I. C. C. committee was empowered by the Black-McKellar bill to ascertain 'fair and reasonable' rates, but no one in the air transportation industry is ready to admit, from the legal standpoint, that the I. C. C. has jurisdiction to settle rates for aviation."

The operators all point to the postoffice department's last statistical report—that for October, 1934—which was issued two days ago, as proof that sweeping reforms in air mail legislation are really needed.

According to this report, they point out, the postoffice department which has constantly charged that air mails were heavily subsidized, actually is showing a considerable profit from operations of two of the largest mail carriers—United Airlines and Transcontinental Western Air, Inc.—and a computed net profit of $79,320 from operations of 10 lines, including the two. The tabulation appearing in adjoining columns shows this.

POSTOFFICE AIR MAIL PROFITS

The postoffice department made a net profit of $79,320 from the operations of ten of the nation's airlines carrying airmail during the month of October, 1934. This was shown yesterday when the department issued a statistical report for the month's operations for the majority of the airmail routes.

The figures indicate that the postoffice made a profit of $102,700 from operations of United Airlines and $84,705 from Transcontinental Western Air, Inc. The computations show that some of the smaller airmail carrying lines' operations did not create a profit, but the profits built up by the larger lines more than offset the losses.

The airmail postage income is calculated from estimates made by financial experts, since the postoffice department consistently has refused to make public any information pertaining to this subject. The experts say that the department receives in postage revenue between 1.25 mills and 1.5 mills for each pound of airmail flown a mile. All the revenue figures included in the following table were calculated on the basis of 1.25 mills' income to the department for each pound mile.

The table shows each operator, pound miles flown by each, percentage of total pound miles flown by each, the postoffice revenue on mail flown by each operator, amount paid for the service, and the percentage of the total pay given to each operator:

Contractor (all routes)—	Total pound miles flown.	Per cent of total pound miles flown.	Total income to postoffice in airmail postage for mail carried.	Amount paid contractor.	Per cent of total pay received by contractor.
United Airlines	277,631,970	47.85	$347,040	$244,340	34.59

Not every airmail route was included in the report, there being 3.22 per cent of the total pound miles unaccounted for.

JAPAN PREPARES TO INVADE CHINA; CLAIMS 2 TOWNS

Orders March Upon Chahar Province.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Jan. 18.—Despite reassuring statements from Japanese military sources that the action will be "localized," apprehension prevails here and at Nanking regarding the proposed drive of the Japanese army in Manchukuo into Chahar province, west of Jehol and northwest of Peiping.

Authoritative foreign sources at Peiping reported that fighting is imminent, while Japanese military reports from Changchun and Peiping confirmed the intention to send infantry and aviation units from Chengteh, capital of Jehol province, to Tanin and Takochen, adjacent to the Jehol-Chahar border.

Japs Claim Both Towns.

The Japanese claim both towns belong to the Manchukuo régime. Gen. Jiro Minami, commander in chief of the Japanese army in Manchukuo, yesterday issued an ultimatum to Gen. Sung Chieh-yuan, Chinese controler of Chahar province, to evacuate immediately.

Gen. Sung is alleged to have ignored the ultimatum and the Japanese decided to dispatch a force, expressing the hope that the forthcoming action would be localized. The ultimatum was served through the Japanese military mission at Kalgan, capital Chahar province.

A Japanese dispatch from Changchun alleged that the Chinese military has recently become aggressive and that therefore the Japanese army had decided to coöperate with Manchukuo to drive out Sung's troops. A Chinese report tonight said Sung is at Tientsin attending his mother's funeral.

See Plan Aimed at Reds.

Chinese reports indicated the belief that the pending Japanese action is more than a mere attempt to eliminate the Chinese forces from the border areas and that the real Japanese intention is to cut the overland route connecting Peiping with Urga, capital of soviet controled Outer Mongolia.

The Chinese also believe Japan intends to make a determined gesture to intimidate the Mongolian princes of Inner Mongolia, who have allegedly been wavering in their allegiance to China.

Soviet Russian authorities here view the situation with considerable apprehension, since the Japanese drive will bring Japanese military influence into direct contact with the borders of Outer Mongolia.

Practically all high officials of Outer Mongolia who went to Moscow to attend the soviet anniversary celebrations in November have now returned to Urga.

WIFE DIVORCES THOMPSON SETON, THE NATURALIST

Santa Fe, N. M., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Grace Gallatin Seton was granted a divorce today from Ernest Thompson Seton of Santa Fe, well known naturalist and author.

Judge J. L. Bailey signed the decree after a brief appearance of attorneys for the couple. Mrs. Seton charged incompatibility. Attorneys said a property settlement had been reached, but its details were withheld.

Mrs. Seton assisted her former husband in a number of his earlier writings, the best known of which probably was "Wild Animals I Have Known."

She had been active in the National league of American Pen Women, Society of Women Geographers and other organizations of similar nature. She is a member of the Colony club of New York. Her home is in Greenwich, Conn.

Seton resides at Seton village here, which is the headquarters of the Woodcraft league of America and the College of Indian Wisdom.

The two have a daughter, Mrs. Ann Seton Chase of Greenwich.

3,564 TO GET JOBS PAVING 73 MILES OF CITY STREETS

Grading, ditching and surfacing of 73 miles of unimproved city streets, along which live some 6,400 families, is to start next Wednesday, Mayor Kelly announced yesterday.

The project, which it is estimated will cost $915,350, will provide total wages of $852,728 for the 3,564 men who will work about three months on the job, the mayor said. None of the cost of the paving is to be assessed against the adjoining property, much of which is occupied by persons on relief.

Of the total cost $895,350 will be provided by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission and $20,000 by the city for tools and materials. Much of the material, such as cinders and crushed rock, is to be furnished without charge to the city, Mayor Kelly said.

If the program is successful, the mayor said, plans will be made to spend $2,550,000 for similar work to provide employment for nearly 12,000 men.

CALLS MEETING OF PUBLISHERS ON NRA DISPUTE

Labor Board's Decision at Issue.

New York, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Howard Davis, chairman of the newspaper national code committee and the daily newspaper code authority, today announced that newspaper publishers will meet in New York City on Jan. 28 to "consider the action of the national labor relations board modifying the daily newspaper code contrary to the provisions of article VII."

Davis' statement follows:

"By direction of the six daily newspaper associations which coöperated in negotiating the code for the daily newspaper publishing business and also by direction of the code authority for the daily newspaper publishing business, a convention of all newspaper publishers who have assented to the code is hereby called to assemble in the Hotel Biltmore in New York City at 10 a. m. Monday, Jan. 28.

Consider Action of Board.

"The convention will consider the action of the national labor relations board modifying the daily newspaper code contrary to the provisions of article VII.

"The decision of the national labor relations board is vital not only as it affects further adherence to the code by the publishers, but more particularly as it affects a free press.

"All publishers who have assented to the code should attend the convention.

"If this decision by the national labor relations board is consented to, even by silence, article VII. of the code, which was designed to protect the right of the people of the United States to have a free press, will be nullified.

"A detailed statement of the situation is being mailed to each assentor to the code."

The statement bore the signature: "Daily Newspaper National Code Committee and the Daily Newspaper Code Authority, Howard Davis, chairman."

Dispute Over California Case.

The action of the labor relations board referred to by Davis was the board's demand that the NRA compliance division take away the Blue Eagle of the San Francisco Call-Bulletin on the ground that the newspaper had failed to heed its order for the reinstatement of Dean S. Jennings, a rewrite man.

Jennings contended he was forced to resign from the staf of the Call-Bulletin because of his activities in the American Newspaper guild. The newspaper contended that the board had no authority to hear the case and announced it stood ready at all times to go before the newspaper industrial board provided by the code and abide by its decision.

In a statement issued on Dec. 28 Davis declared that the labor relations board had asserted its jurisdiction over newspaper code controversies in violation of the provisions of the code.

A collection of postage stamps valued at $100,000 went on exhibit yesterday in the Hotel La Salle at the opening of the Chicago Philatelic society's annual show which will continue through tomorrow.

Collectors, professional and amateur, milled among the exhibits which are under glass, or made purchases from dealers who had their wares for sale on card tables. The 50th annual banquet of the society will be held tonight.

PATLAK IS HELD SANE; NOW FACES SWINDLE TRIAL

Attorney David Y. Patlak of Chicago was pronounced sane in a formal order issued yesterday by officials of the Illinois Security hospital at Menard, where he had been confined for almost a year before his parole a month ago. The action removed the last technical obstacle to his trial in the Cook county Criminal court on a charge of operating a confidence game.

Patlak is charged with swindling small home owners of $160,000 by representing that he had influence with the Home Owners' Loan corporation. Officials of the hospital declared yesterday that the parole of Patlak was legal.

They said they had intended to turn Patlak over to Cook county authorities at the expiration of the parole term on March 14. His stay in the hospital was not legally ended, they said, until the parole had been terminated.

Meanwhile Criminal court attaches prepared for the hearing Tuesday in which Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan has announced that he intends to determine by what authority Patlak was paroled.

LEAVES BANK WITH $210; ROBBED.

Three men in an automobile yesterday halted the car of George Almeroth, 3620 North Sawyer avenue, at 2374 Elston avenue, and robbed him of $210 he had just withdrawn from a bank.

POLICE FIND $5,000 STOLEN CAR LOOT; SEIZE 2 IN HOME

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 10; recovered, 20; stripped, 1 [from police records for the 24 hours ending at midnight Thursday].

John Wuchko 63 years old, and his son, John Jr., 24 years old, were held by county highway police of the Willow Springs station yesterday after $5,000 worth of stolen automobile parts were found in their home at 7422 West 61st street, Argo. Motors, tires, headlights, and other accessories were found by Sergt. Frank Veselka. Wuchko told police that the stolen parts were left in the home by another son, Joseph, who is serving 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary for automobile larceny.

Richard Fitzgibbons, 17 years old, 5524 Emerald avenue, who was captured Jan. 10, a few moments after he had stolen the automobile of George H. Lyons, 6733 Perry avenue, was ordered held to the grand jury in $3,500 bonds yesterday by Judge Joseph A. Graber.

STATES' LIQUOR CONTROL HEADS SEEK TAX CUTS

A proposal for continued efforts to obtain a reduction of federal and state liquor taxes as a curb to bootlegging was voted yesterday by representatives of twenty-five states attending the national conference of state liquor control administrators at the Hotel Sherman.

The delegates rejected as "premature" the resolution of William G. Lewis, Michigan liquor commissioner, demanding specific reductions in the federal taxes on liquor and beer, but ordered the conference tax committee to consider further a definite program for tax reduction.

Lewis urged that the $2.10 a gallon federal tax on domestic liquor be cut to $1.10. He also proposed a reduction from $5 to $3 a gallon on imported liquor, and from $5 to $3 a barrel on domestic beer.

Nineteen Candidates File for Aldermanic Election

Nineteen candidates for alderman in the coming election filed petitions yesterday with the board of election commissioners, making a total of 54 now entered in the campaign. Only one sitting alderman, Edwin F. Meyer [45th], 3744 North Ashland avenue, was included in the group. The deadline on aldermanic filings is next Tuesday.

FRENCH ASSIST SAAR REFUGEES ACROSS BORDER

Fleeing Residents Line Up Before Soup Kitchens.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

FORBACH, France, Jan. 18.—The frontier between France and the Saar territory tonight was the goal of thousands of Saarlanders, who, fearing Nazi terrorism, are seeking a place of refuge.

Over 500 refugees have crossed the border since Sunday's plebiscite in which 90 per cent of the electorate voted to reunite with Germany. Up until last night some 4,000 had applied for French visas and were waiting for means of transportation. And still the rush goes on.

They are coming by train, street car, auto, bicycles, or on foot. Many are laden with household belongings. Others have nothing and frequently no money at all. In such cases the French street car conductors have instructions to give them a free ticket.

Many Are Turned Back.

Once they have been passed by the French customs officials and police they assemble at a café 100 yards down the road where they wait until a large party forms. They then are taken under armed guard in a street car or on foot down the highway the two miles or so that separates the village of Forbach from the frontier.

Many have been turned back because they have no papers, although the French authorities have reduced the official red tape to a minimum.

The French have been forced to take special measures to deal with a new form of Nazi terrorism. Many Saarlanders have been afraid to ask for visas. They allege Nazis circulate among the crowds standing in line outside the French consulate at Saarbruecken and ask emigrants to show their identification cards. Their names are taken down.

To circumvent this the French consul at Saarbruecken opened a special visa office inside the French frontier so that the refugees are not compelled to show any papers until they have crossed the border.

Filled with Refugees.

Forbach is filled with refugees and there are no more accommodations. The emigrants are taken to a special bureau where they are allowed to rest in a warm room. They also are given a medical examination. If they have no money, they are taken to a nearby soup kitchen.

Most of them, unless they have some money of their own, are being assembled in special trains for Toulouse, where, they are optimistically told, they will find work.

The headquarters for the wealthier refugees and prominent political figures is a hotel. There they sit concocting schemes to get their friends out of the Saar.

Eighty-five miners beleaguered by Nazis at Sulzbach escaped today. They had taken refuge in a dormitory of the French mines. It is believed they reached Saarbruecken in safety. The other French mine buildings throughout the territory are likewise being evacuated.

Prepare to Welcome Hitler.

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Saarlanders set to work to day to prepare the triumphal reception they will give Adolf Hitler six weeks hence when they hand their tiny coal basin over to the Nazi fuehrer.

As the last vestiges of anti-Nazi sentiment crumbled in the face of the general jubilance over the approaching reunion with Germany, after 15 years under league of nations government, Saarlanders heard with rejoicing that the first German police will set foot in the Saar March 1.

[The league council voted at Geneva Thursday to transfer the Saar to Germany March 1, on condition that the region become part of the border zone demilitarized under the Versailles treaty and that French and German negotiators settle outstanding questions concerning the transfer.]

After the police, the next day, will come the Nazi Brown Shirts and the black shirted Schutz Staffel guards. Hitler is expected to arrive Sunday. March 3, survey his new territorial acquisition and complete the three day celebration with an address urging Franco-German friendship.

WILL BE TRIED

MARJORIE SWITZ.
[Acme Photo.]

PARIS, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Marjorie Tilley Switz, the East Orange, N. J., woman who is among twenty oddly assorted spy suspects charged with working together to aid soviet Russia, is about to face trial at last, it appears, with her husband, Robert Gordon Switz, and their alleged accomplices.

Since her arrest in mid-December, 1933, Mrs. Switz has passed the months in the Petite Roquette, that 103 year old jail from which Mata Hari, famous spy, was led to a firing squad on Oct. 15, 1917.

Even a dreary courtroom must be a welcome relief to Mrs. Switz, for the meager comforts of the Petite Roquette are those of 1832 rather than 1935. Pampering is scarcely possible in a century-old cell, built when jails were gaols and rather clammy places.

No visitors are admitted, unless they be defense attorneys or members of the family.

ALDERMEN VOTE TO DREDGE NORTH BRANCH OF RIVER

The city council committee on harbors, wharves and bridges yesterday voted to recommend to the council that the city dredge the north branch of the Chicago river for 600 feet north of North avenue to permit barge trafic to reach industries in that area.

The city is now constructing a $1,500,000 bascule bridge over the north branch at Ashland avenue, and industrialists, headed by M. F. Kent, secretary of the North Branch Industrial association, pointed out that the expenditure for a drawbridge would be wasted unless the river is opened to trafic.

Dredging the river to a depth of 12½ feet will cost $4,000, Arthur Sullivan, engineer in the division of bridge design, estimated. The project will be of temporary nature and the committee voted to ask the council to seek federal maintenance of the north branch section in the future after Lieut. Col. Donald H. Connolly, army district engineer, said the government regards the branch as a navigable stream.

CUBA SEIZES 150 DOCTORS IN DRIVE TO END STRIKE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 18.—About 150 physicians, meeting to discuss measures to intensify the strike of physicians now effective here, were arrested tonight by secret service officers and confined incommunicado in Cabanas fortress. The warant for the arrests was issued by Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staf of the army.

The physicians had just adopted a resolution accepting the offer of the National Medical federation's branches throughout the island to join the strike tomorrow. The doctors, including famous specialists and directors of clinics, hospitals, nurseries and asylums, were bunched together like common prisoners and taken in ambulances to the fort across the harbor.

Two hours before the raid President Mendieta had signed a decree dissolving the federation.

Lawyer Thinks He Knows Where John Can Be Found

Mrs. Ruth Lynam Duncan yesterday filed in the Circuit court a suit for divorce from John G. Duncan, 431 Webster avenue, a traveling salesman. Excessive drinking was alleged as the ground for divorce. Attorney John S. O'Donnell, who represents Mrs. Duncan, was appointed at his own request a deputy sherif to serve notice of the suit. Duncan, he said, was evading service at his home but could be found two nights a week at the Moody Bible tabernacle.

5 INTERNATIONAL DISPUTES DUMPED INTO LEAGUE LAP

Nazi Activities in Danzig Up for Scrutiny.

GENEVA, Jan. 18.—(AP)—International problems descended on the league of nations today from points as widely separated as the free city of Danzig, Ethiopia, Albania, Hungary and Poland.

Nazi activities in Danzig, former German territory now under league control, presented an outstanding cause for concern, particularly since they came to Geneva's attention so soon after Germany's overwhelming victory in recovering the Saar basin territory.

The dispute between Italy and Ethiopia arising out of a series of border incidents along the Italian Somaliland-Ethiopian frontier was projected into the league limelight by Ethiopia's formal request that the league act to halt Italian "aggression."

Hungary Disclaims Guilt.

Hungary contributed an echo of last month's controversy with Jugo-Slavia in a report definitly disclaiming official responsibility for the plot which resulted in the assassination of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and Louis Barthou, French foreign minister.

A Greek protest against the treatment of Greek minorities in Albania was turned over to the world court. The league requested an advisory opinion on whether Albania's closing of private schools attended by Greeks violates its pledges of protection for nonnationals.

The league council, determined to oppose any agitation for restoration of the free city of Danzig to the reich, heard the district boldly termed "the smallest German state in Europe." The reference came from Arthur Greiser, president of the Danzig senate, a few minutes after he had raised his hand to the council in a Nazi salute.

British Envoy Is Caustic.

This brought an immediate retort from Capt. Anthony Eden, British delegate.

"We are glad," said Eden, "to receive these assurances from a representative of the region we call the free city of Danzig."

Protests from Catholic priests in the Free City that Catholic children were forbiden to wear uniforms unless they were of Nazi design brought the Danzig problem before the council. Sean Lester, the league's high commissioner for the city, submitted a report indicating the existence of intense Nazi activity in the district.

The council warned Grieser that the senate must live up to its constitution and ordered the Catholic dispute to be settled by direct negotiation.

Germans Accuse Poles.

Another question of minorities, in which Poles were charged with withholding licenses to sell liquor from German residents, provoked the Polish delegate, M. Komarnicki, to such wrath he jumped up from the council table and strode from the room.

The council adopted a resolution expressing the hope Poland would extend to its German minorities the same license privileges enjoyed by its own citizens.

Hungary's report on the activities of international terrorists within its borders asserted that the "minutest inquiry" had failed to establish any link between Hungarian authorities and the Marseilles assassinations. Five minor officials, it said, had been found guilty of negligence in controling Croat immigration and had been punished.

King Albert's Sister Will Enter Convent in Germany

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—Princess Josephine of Belgium, 62 year old sister of the late King Albert, will enter a convent at St. Lioba in Guenthersthal, near Freiburg, it was announced today. Her late husband was Prince Charles von Hohenzollern. Special services will mark the entry of the princess into the convent.

FRENCH FARMERS VISIT BERLIN ON A PEACE MISSION

Will Meet with German Peasants Today.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 18.—The French national anthem will be played publicly in Germany for the first time in years as a climax to a lecture on Napoleon, tomorrow. The ceremony will be broadcast by the government controled radio system.

Advocates of Franco-German rapprochement see an excellent omen in this incident. Believers in the possibility of a close Franco-German friendship are further elated over the fact that in the wake of the settlement of the Saar problem and the recent conversations between French and German war veterans, farmers of both countries are getting ready to meet in Berlin.

The farmers began their rapprochement in Goslar last November at the National Nutrition Guild meeting under the chairmanship of Walter Darre, minister of agriculture.

The French delegation will arrive here tomorrow to discuss "future cooperation between the peasants on both sides of the frontier."

Diplomatic circles are less optimistic because the French and German viewpoints are widely divergent on the question of armaments. In unofficial conversations the Germans insist that if they agree to maintain a demilitarized zone on the western border as provided by the Versailles treaty the French must be ready to demilitarize a similar strip of land on their side of the frontier.

The Germans declare they are ready to submit to international control of armaments, but demand that France and her eastern allies agree to the same control.

These are only two of the many subjects about which heated controversies are raging between European cabinets in the struggle to reach an agreement on armaments.

Peru's Capital 400 Years Old; Nation Honors Pizarro

LIMA, Peru, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Francisco Pizarro, leader of the small group of Spaniards who discovered and conquered Peru for the white race, was honored today during celebration of Lima's 400th anniversary. An equestrian statue of the conquistador was unveiled by President Oscar Benavides. Foreign diplomats as well as all high government officials of Peru were present, and Ambassador Fred Morris Dearing of the United States delivered a speech.

MEXICO WILL BATTLE FAMINE IN GASOLINE BY IMPORTING FUEL

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 18.—(AP)—A threatened transportation tie-up in Mexico resulting from strikes in several oil companies apparently was averted today as the government announced it would import and distribute petroleum products essential to industry.

Earlier striking employés of the Aguila [Royal Dutch Shell subsidiary] Oil company asked President Cardenas to confiscate the extensive properties of the British owned corporation and turn them over to the workers. To this petition, based on the company's alleged refusal to accept collective bargaining, the government late today had returned no reply.

In announcing that it would remove the oil import tax and bring in gasoline and petroleum products as long as may be necessary, however, the administration emphasized that its action was taken "without invading the field of action" of the strike, the status of which remained unchanged.

FRANCE APPOINTS GEN. GAMELIN AS NEW ARMY CHIEF

Age Limit Forces Weygand to Retire.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 18.—Important changes were decreed today for the French army high command. The cabinet decided to make Gen. Maurice Gamelin, 62 year old chief of staf since 1931, the new chief of the nation's armies. He will succeed Gen. Maxime Weygand, who will reach the age limit, 68, next Monday.

Besides retaining his post of chief of staf, Gen. Gamelin will acquire Weygand's title of vice president of the superior council of war for purposes of efficiency.

That and the promotions of Gen. Alphonse Georges—a victim of the assassin's bullets which struck down King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France—and Gen. Louis Colson as Gen. Gamelin's assistants constitute the gist of the official announcement.

May Hold Job a Year.

But behind the appointments are important considerations. Gen. Gamelin's tenure as commander in chief is scheduled to be very brief inasmuch as Gen. Georges is considered the best brains of the high command following the departure of Weygand.

It is freely predicted Gamelin will not last more than a year. Georges' wound, from which he only recently recovered to return to his post, is said to have left him physically unfit to take the post at this time. It also is reported that other matters of a political nature make it unwise to plump him, a comparatively young man, into the topmost rank now.

Many Frenchmen wanted the retention of Weygand—Marshal Foch's righthand man and some say Foch's brains in the world war.

Several members of the cabinet, it is declared, urged Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin to retain him at least during 1935 in the face of the "German menace" and the crisis created by the slump in conscripts due to the low birth rate during the war.

Turns Down Request.

But Flandin refused, fearing a government crisis would be precipitated if he asked the chamber of deputies to ratify an extension of the age limit.

In the reorganization the high command returns approximately to what it was up to 1920, including the war years. Over Gamelin, nominally at least, is the president of the superior war council, who is minister of war.

The cabinet also appointed Gen. Henri Bineau, director of the Centre des Hautes Etudes Militaires, and Gen. Antoine Hure, commander in chief of French troops in Morocco, to fill two vacancies in the war council.

JAIL'S WIDE OPEN IN AURORA; DULL DAY FOR KEEPER

Charles Stolp, lockup keeper at the Aurora city jail, sat disconsolately in his office yesterday.

"Tsk, tsk," he said, shaking his head. "Just think of it. A town of 50,000 people, and not a person in jail. Not even a drunk. I never saw anything like it."

And it was true. For the first time since anybody around the town could remember, there wasn't a single prisoner. The barred doors were wide open, and Jailer Stolp had an easy day.

"I don't know why it is," he said. "Either the world is getting better or the police are getting a lot worse."

JURY GETS STORY OF BUS WORKER'S STRIKE MURDER

State Links Taber and Kehoe in Slaying.

How James J. Kelly, a dispatcher for the Chicago Motor Coach company, was killed last Sept. 26 during the bus strike was told yesterday to a jury in the Criminal court of Judge William V. Brothers. How that killing involved William Taber and Joseph J. Kehoe, officials of the street car men's union, who are on trial charged with the murder, was outlined by Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan in his opening statement.

"Last Aug. 16 a strike was called against the motor coach company," Coghlan said. "Shortly thereafter Earl Renner, a co-defendant in this case who has been granted a separate trial, called upon Kehoe, whose headquarters were in the same building as those of the striking union.

Tells Story of Violence Reign.

"Renner was told by Kehoe to organize a gang on the northwest side, to break bus windows, assault and slug bus company employés, and help win the strike. Renner got in touch with Al Semple, a man named White and a man named Bretschneider and they went out breaking bus windows.

"Then Renner reported to Kehoe and was paid $40 and given further orders. Next day John Bretschneider was arrested while the gang was breaking windows. Renner reported to Kehoe, and Kehoe assigned Abe Margolis to gain Bretschneider's release on bail.

"Kehoe made many other payments to Renner, and Renner in turn paid the gang. Then Renner was instructed to take his gang to the south side. Lloyd Slee, a street car motorman, had been told by Kehoe and Taber to commit acts of violence there against the bus company. Slee had a gang and was paid $900.

Links Killing to Strike.

"The violence was for the purpose of winning the strike. We will show that in that campaign of violence Kelly was slain."

The others named by Prosecutor Coghlan have been arrested and have agreed to testify in the present trial. In all, 27 others have been indicted and have been granted separate trial.

Coghlan's statement was stopped by Judge Brothers when he mentioned that a woman was killed by a ball bearing hurled through the window of a bus on the south side. Coghlan then began calling witnesses.

The defense waived opening statements.

Mrs. Angela Kelly, 5031 Maypole avenue, the slain bus dispatcher's widow, was the first witness to be put on the stand for the state. She told briefly of seeing him in the hospital the morning he was shot and shortly before he died. She said she knew of no motive for his murder.

Witnesses Tell Story.

Six persons who were aboard the street car on which Kelly was a passenger when he was assaulted as the trolley neared Cicero and Grand avenues then took the stand and gave eyewitness accounts of what happened.

Agnes Barczwski, 709 North Cicero avenue, said she was startled to hear shots fired and see several men slugging a uniformed passenger. [Kelly, in uniform, was on his way home from a company garage.] She ran out to the back platform of the street car, she said, where John Phalen, the conductor, was crouched.

When the car was stopped, all the passengers rushed out, she said, and the sluggers were lost in the confusion. She did not identify the sluggers.

Her testimony was verified by the other witnesses: Patrick Quealy, 956 North Lawler avenue; Jerry Peisch, 5016 Waveland avenue, the motorman; Henry Boehringer, 5033 Quincy street; Michael Mulvihill, 4744 West Van Buren street; and Phalen, the conductor.

Judge Limits Prosecution.

In the morning session Judge Brothers announced that he would not permit the state to introduce evidence of the numerous acts of violence that attended the bus strike. The state could establish the commission of the murder, Judge Brothers said, and introduce evidence to show that a conspiracy existed, with the defendants participating as conspirators.

First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley, who is in charge of the prosecution, said he wished to show that the conspiracy to intimidate bus drivers and to keep passengers from riding buses grew and swelled after it was conceived.

Judge Limits Testimony.

"By swelling you mean to put in poison," Judge Brothers commented. "I don't propose to let you put in poison."

"It is not the aim of the state to win this case by the use of poison," Crowley replied. "We do want to bring in injured persons to corroborate testimony by accomplices, who might otherwise not be believed, that at certain times and places they committed acts of violence."

Judge Brothers said he could not rule in advance on the admissibility of evidence, but he did not intend to allow the kind of corroboration mentioned by Crowley. He directed the prosecutors to avoid mentioning the acts of violence in the opening statements.

MILWAUKEE ROAD'S SPEED TRAIN BEGINS SERVICE TOMORROW

Eighty-five miles in 80 minutes is the schedule for the Chicago-Milwaukee run to be inaugurated by the Chicago Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad tomorrow. One train a day each way will make the trip at an average speed of slightly better than 60 miles an hour.

The Milwaukee road's new service will equal the time between Chicago and Milwaukee of the Chicago and North Western railroad's "400," a high speed train running from Chicago to Minneapolis and St. Paul. The "400" has been operated since Jan. 2. Beginning tomorrow both roads will be operating on the fastest train schedules between metropolitan centers in the United States.

Coincident with the new schedule will be the use of new "luxury" day coaches by the Milwaukee road. It was announced by W. B. Dixon, general passenger agent. The new coaches, described as "more pretentious than parlor cars," will be used on all of the eleven daily trains of the Milwaukee road between Chicago and Milwaukee.

The Milwaukee road also will begin selling tomorrow a commuter's ticket good for 10 rides between Milwaukee and Chicago. The ticket, good for one year, will be at a rate considerably less than present fares.

UNITED CAMPAIGN FOR LINK BRIDGE FUNDS IS URGED

Leaders Ask Action to Get U. S. Money.

BY HAL FOUST.

The state, county, city, and park districts were urged yesterday to push vigorously an application for federal "easy money" for the construction of the outer link bridge and of elevated highways in Chicago. This spur to activity by the local governmental units was given by the city's leaders and public officials attending a joint luncheon in the Great Northern hotel given by the Chicago Association of Commerce good roads committee and the city council trafic committee.

The outer link bridge was described by George Donoghue, general superintendent of Chicago parks, and by others as a fitting project for President Roosevelt's four billion dollar work relief program. It was the consensus of the fifty at the luncheon that the state highway department will be able to finish this span with the expected allotment from an appropriation by the current congress.

Highway Plans Not Yet Ready.

As for the proposed elevated highway system, doubts were expressed as to whether the necessary preliminary work could be completed in time for an application for a federal grant for any extended mileage. However, Kendrick Harger, district engineer for the Illinois highway department, reminded the meeting that the state has already submitted to Washington plans for an elevated structure in Randolph street east from Union park to be included in an "easy money" program.

"In regard to other parts of the system," said Col. H. L. Kellogg, chairman of the association of commerce committee, "it's doubtful whether right of way can be obtained and specifications drawn in time to apply for funds appropriated by the present congress.

Urges Prompt Action on Routes.

"However, this should not detract from our governmental units making a vigorous effort to determine promptly the specific routes and engineering designs. If we are too late to get money from this session of congress, we'll be ready if the next congress again appropriates for public construction to relieve unemployment."

Ald. John A. Masson [48th], chairman of the council trafic committee, said he will advise his committee to act in accordance with the desires of the joint meeting.

SATURDAY NEWS OF NEW BOOKS

U. S. Diplomacy Is Described by Pearson-Brown

Futile Efforts to Insure Peace Told.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The American Diplomatic Game," by Drew Pearson and Constantine Brown. [Doubleday-Doran.] Published on Thursday.

WHETHER America has been in the duffer class in the diplomatic game is a question which many ardent souls enjoy discussing while bands properly play "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Dixie," for either one of which their patriotic ardor would galvanize them onto their feet under the vague impression that it is our national anthem.

What the average American thinks about his country's part in international affairs is that it is as important as its tail to the Manx cat. Most of us have an idea that the Monroe Doctrine gave, and the Atlantic and Pacific oceans give us permanently, the happy, comfortable isolation of Great-Aunt Flo, who is stone deaf except when she wants to hear something and who has just enough arthritis to keep her chairbound when there's a pile of dishes to be washed. And most of us believe that God ordained that it be so.

Mr. Pearson and Mr. Brown, both veteran newspaper correspondents, Mr. Pearson one of the veiled prophets of "The Washington Merry-Go-Round," have just given us a book which shows America's amateur standing as high or higher than the professional standings of the old league players, and points out that without our players there are or can be few conference games, and tells us just how much our isolation has got us.

Trace American Efforts for Peace.

The diplomatic theme song of this extremely interesting volume is "Yes, we have no peace" . . . peace making which emerges dripping with irony as the final pages sum up the possibilities of inevitable war. Beginning with Mr. Kellogg's impressive peace pact to outlaw war, which at the time seemed the millennium for the world, the authors trace the history of the attempts of the world toward a permanent peace through pacts, disarmament conferences, naval parity, arbitration, embargo of arms, moratoria, mandates, and all of the other moral suasion panaceas which have been the idealistic or political or purely pragmatic passion of various nations since half the world fought a war to end war.

One after the other they are presented to the reader, with their inside as well as their outside histories told in pungent language; one after the other they are seen to wither on the parent vine. And then in one swift chapter the authors tell just how much good they have done toward insuring our children's life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Present Some Good Anecdotes.

The two authors are perhaps not so rapierlike in their chronicling as were Mr. Pearson and R. S. Allen, his co-calliope player in "The Washington Merry-Go-Round," but there are many good journalistic anecdotes in their record of a quieter game, played with more secret signals and even more forward buck passing. One of the best is what Ambassador Paul Claudel said when Ogden Mills, Mr. Castle and Herbert Feis called at the French embassy to congratulate its head upon the success of their common effort in the signing of the Hoover moratorium.

"Claudel," say the authors, "ordered a bottle of champagne and, lifting his glass, drank this toast: 'To the crisis we have just avoided and to the catastrophe which will follow.'"

What has followed most of the brilliantly avoided diplomatic crises of the last few years seems to be catastrophe, according to the authors, who see no hope of avoiding another European war, who tell how shavingly close we came to war with Japan ourselves, who find South America seething.

"The American Diplomatic Game" is a fascinating recital for those of us who like to think but are sometimes a little hazy what we're thinking about.

Manufacturer Sees Recovery Inevitable.

On the other hand, on Friday was published a book by an English woolen manufacturer, Harold Fisher, with international experience in trade, who firmly believes in "The Inevitable World Recovery" [Doubleday-Doran], and tells why and how it will come.

Harold Nicolson, his brilliant fellow countryman, declares that the book possesses "brilliance and a basis." And speaking of that gifted young man [and as we were of diplomacy], his trilogy on diplomacy is one of the fine interpretive historical documents in modern literature. It began with his life of his father, "Sir Arthur Nicolson, Bart., First Lord Carnock, a Study in the Old Diplomacy," which was published in this country as "Portrait of a Diplomatist," and "Peacemaking," which was the best report of the Versailles conference and its ironies that came out of that august joke, and "Curzon, the Last Phase," in which diplomacy today has its brilliant analysis.

Matthew Woll on Labor Program.

Also published this week is "Labor, Industry and Government," by Matthew Woll [Appleton-Century], which is a simple statement for the layman of problems which fill the international press. What labor has done, what it wants to do, its relation to industry and to the government, and its relations laterally through the international labor movements are all discussed by a vice president of the American Federation of Labor who has been an intimate associate and confidant of its presidents, Gompers and Green, and who has served on every important committee of the federation for years.

Among the New Books

'House Divided' Finishes Trilogy by Pearl Buck

Author Pays First Visit to Chicago.

PEARL BUCK, author of "The Good Earth," which will reach its completion with the publication on Monday of "A House Divided," the end of the trilogy of modern China, visited Chicago for the first time on Thursday to lecture under the William Vaughn Moody Foundation at the University of Chicago and to meet at luncheon the members of the Chicago Woman's club.

Mrs. Buck has in her face and her manner the same frank integrity that fills her books . . . it is a rare quality which sometimes shines out of human eyes and in human actions. "Rightness" is perhaps as good a word as any for it. But whatever the word, there it is in Pearl Buck and enhanced by friendly forthrightness and a sharp and quick intelligence.

I wondered whether she had conceived the "Good Earth" as the first panel of a trilogy or whether it had grown as did the "Forsyte Saga."

"I conceived it as a trilogy covering fifty years in China and three distinct types of the modern Chinese. The first book has been erroneously called the life of the farmer. I see its hero as the man who made his fortune through the soil and left it, the Chinese counterpart of the American self-made man, for many of the great Chinese fortunes have come from the soil.

"The second book ["Sons"] is the story of the great Chinese war lord who might be compared to, but is not, I understand, like American racketeers, because the bandits in China start robbing for necessity for food. The end of the trilogy tells the story of the revolutionists, the patriots, the youth who, in China as well as here, want to build a new and a better world."

When she was asked what her next book is to be she said that it is already written and named. It will be called "American Woman" and it is the story of an American woman in China.

"Yourself?" she was asked.

"No, not myself, but my mother. She went as a missionary with my father in the eighties to China. She had special American qualities which, it seems to me, are alien to the Chinese, especially the pioneering spirit. My mother had a great integrity of mind and of spirit, but so have many Chinese. But that pioneering urge, which drove men and women to the west in the old days, was translated into a spiritual pioneering urge in her case and that quality is not a Chinese one."

"The book I am writing now? It is not a Chinese novel. Its scene is America, but it is not the scene but the characters which interest me."

"Why do I write? Because I like writing more than I like doing anything else in the world. . . . Well, I start writing as soon as I get my child off to school in the morning and I work until one o'clock, without interruption."

"When did you begin writing?" some one asked. "I can't remember exactly. But I do know that even as a very small child I knew I wanted to write. I'm not one of those who wrote novels at the age of 11, but I wrote something all the time. My mother, knowing my ambition, used to have me write something for her at least once every week which she would correct and discuss with me."

Perfect training, I silently commented.

Are you going to live in America permanently?" she was asked.

"Let's say indefinitly," she answered.

Mrs. Buck thinks that there is more material in her native land than anywhere else in the world . . . and her native land is the United States, although her entire conscious childhood was spent in China. She learned to speak Chinese before she did English. Of the three novels of the Good Earth trilogy, the second, "The Sons" is more Chinese than the others, she said, in its form and its treatment.

To the ordinary reader, unschooled in Chinese story telling technique and phraseology, Mrs. Buck's manner and mood of narrative seem influenced more by the Bible than by anything else. F. B.

London Drops Old Ideas of Book Seasons

Late Publications Among Best Sellers.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—These are early days for news of what the English publishers are to offer their patrons in 1935, but one interesting fact about the book world in London is that a change has come over notions of the limits of the publishing seasons.

In the past an English publisher who showed any new book to the booksellers after the end of October was met with the news that the booksellers already had plenty of books on their shelves. Now it must be said that the very last weeks of the old year saw the publication of several important books which immediately took their places among the best sellers of the year.

The new novels, for example, of Susan Ertz [Hodder & Stoughton] and Thornton Wilder [Longmans] had both very late and very great successes which will carry them well into 1935, while St. John Ervine's biography of Gen. Booth, "God's Soldier" [Heinemann], appearing just before Christmas, kept reviewers and booksellers busy right through the holiday period.

Mr. Ervine has spent a number of years in gathering material for this book and transforming it into a dramatic narrative. He has had difficulties galore, first, owing to the troublous conditions by which the Salvation Army has recently been beset, and, second, owing to the extraordinary mass of material which made his work at first unmanageably bulky. But he has succeeded. There can never be a better large scale life of Gen. Booth.

Mr. Ervine has also had another success this winter. Some years ago he wrote a comedy called "Anthony and Anna." In spite of the great London success of "The First Mrs. Fraser" he could not obtain a West End production of this play. It was printed and it was read.

At last, in November, the managers of a small experimental theater in London asked if they might include it in their repertory. At once all the dramatic critics in London acclaimed it as delicious, and a stampede of West End managers occurred. As a consequence "Anthony and Anna" will have its long delayed West End production.

Speaking of the book world reminds me that a comprehensive book about the whole art and craft of bookmaking is to be published in the spring by Thomas Nelson and Sons. It will be the most elaborate thing of its kind so far produced, for each chapter will be written by an expert, and it should be assured of wide support from those who really wish to understand every aspect of book production.

H. V. Morton, whose account of his travels in Palestine, "In the Steps of the Master" [Rich & Cowan] has sold more largely in the last six months than any other English book, wanted first of all to become an actor. Though not born in Shakespeare's country, he lived there in boyhood and was saturated in Shakespeare's plays.

But instead of becoming an actor he became a reporter on a Birmingham newspaper and later a London journalistic writer bent upon "discovering England." His discovery enthralled the public.

Writes Psychological Study of Captain, Crew of Titanic

"Outward Bound from Liverpool," by Edouard Peisson [Stokes], translated from the French by C. R. Benstead, is a new and compelling fictional use of the Titanic tragedy, with the captain and the crew rather than the passengers as psychological foci.

Mystery of the Week

BY MORTIMER QUICK.

A very queer and slightly cock-eyed story is "The Murder of My Aunt" [Minton, Balch], by Richard Hull. A nephew arrives at the reasoned conclusion that he just can't abide the aunt who has brought him up and continues to support him in idleness and therefore she must die. He plots and he plans, but somehow his laudable purpose is doomed to frustration. He doesn't seem to be as good at murdering as, in his own estimation, he is at almost everything else.

What finally happens may or may not give you pleasure, but you are bound to get a certain grim amusement out of it. That the aunt is a noble character and the nephew a worm is evident from the beginning, but nevertheless it is a little hard to decide which one should be fatally choked.

The story, written in diary form, is very well handled and much is learned by implication. It all happens in darkest and wettest Wales, where nothing seems to happen except in the addled mind of that incredible nephew; that seethes with malign activity and secretly inscribes its every thought.

Matter, handling, and conception are all fresh and entertaining. The story is interesting though slight, funny though monstrous, and has a literary manner all its own. It will not appeal to those who like straight, stern murder with Scotland Yard hard on the scent, but to whomever loves subtlety and casual criminality it will give a crazy delight.

Longfellow's Kin Protests Boston's Literary Censorship

Boston, Mass., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Boston's censorship in general and the banning of Sean O'Casey's play, "Within the Gates," in particular, saddened Prof. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana tonight and moved him to reflect upon the city's traditional freedom of thought and the constitutional guarantees of free speech.

The barring of the play from a Boston theater by Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, efforts to ban sale of the book in Cambridge and Boston, and withdrawal of permission to use a hall in widely known Tremont temple in which he intended to discuss the Irish playwright Monday night prompted Prof. Dana, grandson of the poet, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and a former instructor at Columbia, to protest.

"I think this censorship is unfair," said Prof. Dana. "It hurts Boston in many ways, including a financial one."

You know they're genuine if they come from WALGREEN'S

Reprinted from Arthur Brisbane's Column "Today," January 8, 1935:

"If you buy alcoholic drinks, buy from dealers in whom you have confidence. The federal government yesterday seized one million one hundred thousand empty whisky, wine and liqueur bottles to prevent bootleggers refilling them with bootleg supplies.

"An empty whisky bottle, bought for two cents, filled with eight cents' worth of bootleg whisky, may mean profit for the bootlegger and mean poison for the consumer. Buy from a retailer whom you trust, who buys from those who manufacture legally, and buy brands that you know."

HEREDITY IN BUSINESS MANAGEMENT.

Political doctors are preparing to cure our society of the illness known as insecurity. They wish to relieve the suffering and economic dislocation associated with loss of employment, illness, and old age. There can be no quarrel with their objective, but their procedures are open to criticism. The congressional doctors might profitably borrow the technique of the public health authorities and before imposing remedies engage in a search for causes.

If this common sense method were followed the legislature would find that one of the most fruitful causes of insecurity is the instability of individual businesses. Pushing the inquiry a step farther, they would find that one of the commoner causes of business instability is the deterioration of management which follows the death or retirement of competent owner-executives. It follows that if some means could be found of preventing this deterioration of management a great deal of the suffering which is borne by employés when vigorous enterprises decay could be avoided with gain to every one and at no cost to any one.

Nearly all employers these days have a strong sense of obligation to their employés. Most prosperous businesses and many which are not prosperous have endeavored in one form or another to protect their employés against the hazards of life, particularly illness and old age. The continued existence of a prosperous business is itself the best guaranty against unemployment. The continued earning power of the business is an assurance that it can pay wages during illness and pensions to its men on retirement.

It is because of these relationships that the transfer of management in business today is fraught with peril for employés and investors alike. The custom has been to will the management as well as the property to the owner's heirs who are not always the best men available to carry the responsibility. The popular notion of the rich man's son and the rich man's son-in-law may be only half true and still the fitness of these inheritors for the heavy responsibility of directing a business upon which hundreds and perhaps thousands are dependent for their livelihoods may be questioned. It is no kindness to push men beyond their depths.

The traditional succession in management through inheritance has the additional disadvantage of discouraging ambition on the part of employés. They know from the start that, however able they may prove to be, they are not likely to attain the goal of responsible directorship of the enterprise. That prize and the financial reward and dignity that go with it are reserved for men whose abilities are often untested and whose leadership often proves disastrous.

The hereditary succession in government has been abandoned in most countries and where it has not been abandoned it has been greatly modified. It was invaluable during the many centuries when any assured continuity of administration was better than the dog fight for power which would otherwise have followed the death of the reigning monarch. With the spread of wealth, education, and security other forms of succession were found preferable because nothing of security was lost and greater competence in administration was obtained.

Business has gone through a somewhat similar evolution. In the first upward thrust of industry the hereditary autocrat was indispensable. Capital was hard to get and greatly needed. Success, therefore, depended to no small degree upon the exercise of ruthlessness in keeping what you had and getting more. Both circumstances encouraged the handing down of the earning power (to provide additional capital) and the management (to provide the ruthlessness) to one or at most a few sons.

What is needed today in control of a well established business is not so much a violently acquisitive management to squeeze the last penny of profit, at the expense of labor, consumers, and competitors, as an alert management which will be eager to develop and adopt technical improvements in production; a management which will not let new products take its market or new corporations steal its primacy. Such a management should have no great difficulty in earning or borrowing the capital needed to maintain orderly growth and thus provide greater security of livelihood for employés as well as investors.

There is, of course, no infallible method of obtaining this kind of leadership. Heredity does not provide it. At the other extreme, the election of executives by the employés would tend to destroy efficiency and thus invite failure, as recent experience in Russia has proved anew. The transfer of management to the principal executives of the business, men of proved competence and experience, offers a more hopeful outlook. A plan by which this end could be achieved without interfering with the right of the retiring executive to provide for his dependents will be discussed in subsequent editorials.

ILLINOIS CONGRESSMEN, PLEASE NOTE.

A chart published in THE TRIBUNE financial page Jan. 9 we think deserves the attention of the representatives of the people of Illinois at Washington. It presented a map of the United States by states and showed what percentage of relief funds was contributed by the federal government in each state during the first nine months of 1934.

The representatives and guardians of our interests at Washington will observe that of the federal fund to which the taxpayers of Illinois make so substantial a contribution 57.8 per cent of the money we spent on employment relief came from the federal till. Turning to other states, they will find that in Florida 99.9 per cent of relief is provided from federal funds. In other words, Florida contributed one-tenth of 1 per cent of its relief expenditure. Mississippi has drawn from Washington 99.2, thus contributing 8 tenths of 1 per cent from its own pocket. New Mexico gets 99 per cent of its relief funds from Washington, North Carolina 98.6 per cent, Huey Long's Louisiana 98 per cent, Tennessee 98.1 per cent, Wyoming 97.6 per cent, South Carolina 97.4 per cent, Georgia 95.1 per cent, Arkansas, Alabama and Nevada 95 per cent each, Oregon 93.4 per cent, North Dakota 91.6 per cent, the District of Columbia 90.6 per cent.

The states which receive a smaller percentage of federal money than Illinois are Massachusetts 46.3 per cent, Texas 46.8 per cent, Rhode Island 49.3 per cent, Maryland 49.8 per cent, Iowa 50.7 per cent, Connecticut 52.3 per cent, New York 53.8 per cent, and Maine 54.9 per cent.

In other words, nine of the forty-eight states contribute to their own relief percentages ranging from 53.7 per cent to 56.1 per cent. Florida and Mississippi contribute virtually nothing or, to be exact, 1 tenth of 1 per cent and 8 tenths of 1 per cent, respectively. Sixteen states contribute less than 10 per cent. Of these nine states are of the "deep south," into which the Bankhead cotton act has been pouring easy money, which doubtless accounts for the reports from the mail order houses of improved business. Florida, which provides one-tenth of 1 per cent of its relief fund, is having a boom.

The states that are carrying the largest proportion of the relief burden are with an exception or two the states which make the largest contributions to the federal relief fund. Thus they get it going and coming. They are carrying not only the largest part of the relief burden but also the largest part of the whole huge burden of federal expenditure in every form.

It is probable if not certain that protest against this situation is futile, so far as any immediate correction is concerned. Nevertheless, it should be made emphatically and persistently, for if the gargantuan growth of federal spending is to be checked it must be resisted by the states that are its chief victims. Indeed, their case has a broader base than their own interest, for they are the states upon whose enterprise the government and the nation must depend for substantial recovery. If they are to be crushed by exactions, they cannot sustain, as the present policies of federal spending threaten, the consequences which will not be long in reaching every state, even those that now seem to be thriving on easy money.

PROFESSIONAL TENNIS.

A week's professional playing of tennis has earned $6,000 each for Lott and Stoeffen, matched against Tilden and Vines. As self-supporting professionals they must find their own board and keep, which sometimes in the form of expense allowances compensate the amateurs.

The British Lawn Tennis association is trying to keep Perry and Austin away from the professional ranks by modifying rules to permit gainful pursuits even if their skill is used in such commercial engagements as movie appearances. Perry is said to have been offered $50,000 to turn professional. To turn away required heroism.

Amateur tennis has been for years in the unwholesome atmosphere of Brahmin rules which defeat their purpose. The healthy contrast was found in golf, in which sport an amateur was no less an amateur because there were professionals, not blacklisted, with whom he could play in tournaments without losing caste. Tennis has endeavored to keep alive the feudal distinction between gentlemen and players, the object of which was to keep the gentlemen from being licked by their betters.

Editorial of the Day

TOWN MEETING TERCENTENARY.

[Hartford Courant.]

While Connecticut towns contend for the honor of being designated as the earliest settled, their forerunners, the towns of Massachusetts, are arguing as to which belongs the distinction of holding the first town meeting. Watertown puts in its claim for its vigorous protests against Gov. Winthrop's heavy hand in local affairs. Boston also insists it had a town meeting in 1634. There seems to be considerable less question that in February, 1635, both Cambridge and Charlestown held such meetings. At all events, the typical form of government of the New England settlements was obviously a spontaneous and common expression of the way the freemen of these communities thought that public business should be carried on. They were independent by disposition, ready to think for themselves on every point, but ready also to put the question to the vote and to abide by the decision of the majority.

The town meeting has been idealized in the course of the last of the three centuries of its development. It is still hailed as "a little republic," the purest and simplest form of democracy, but it has not always been serene. Its most practical virtues have been in the opinion of many its "gumption and common sense." With the increasing size of the town it has tended to lose both its democracy and its common sense. A hundred years ago Boston, with 7,000 voters, gave up the old style of government, but Brookline, just next door, has preserved the tradition undefiled up to the present, even though its voters number 22,000.

So long has loyalty to the town meeting prevailed that in many places after there were too many voters to permit them all to gather in any available hall, the precincts elected delegates to a general meeting. By such a representative system it was possible to do business with considerable dispatch. In March, 1932, the representatives of the 40,000 people of Arlington, Mass., transacted the year's business in eight minutes, whereas it took Bar Harbor three days to get through its warant. If the time was devoted to details it is hard to see that much was gained; if to principles, it must have been such an occasion as to call forth new Daniel Websters.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the gnips fall where they may.

THE WEATHER MAN SAYS a blizzard is on the way. That'll be nice for the resorters down at Miami and southern California. They get awfully bored with nothing to do but loll under palm trees and pose for newspaper photographers and they pout and feel they've wasted their money until they see a headline in the morning paper, "All Northern States in Grasp of Ice King; Temperature Sixty-nine Plus Below Zero." Then they break into merry laughter and rush around to each other and show the bad news and say, "Oh, aren't you glad we came away from there when we did? Oh, how ghastly to be back home freezing to death!" Then they sing "La la la," and rush to their rooms to send back postcards of orange trees doing their stuff and an original thought or two such as "Having grand time—wish you were here." Funny how we humans only have a good time when we find out that our friends are miserable.

WEST WINDOWS.

I could not bear the strain of endless days
If I remembered still the peace of night;
The fall of meteors in splintered light
And the mysterious call of star-strewn ways.
If Heaven has no windows looking West
Where I may watch great sunsets flame and pale,
Mauve shadows drop their beautifying veil,
A bird go heavy-winging to its nest,
That all-pervading light, insatiate
Would be as caustic to my wounded eyes;
I should ask leave to go outside the Gate
In search of Night's entrancing subtleties
And softly singing under astral skies
I might forget the lights of Paradise.

"218½ MILLION DOLLARS Asked by Administration for 'Social Safety' Pension Bills."—Headline. Oh, pooh, these New Deal appropriations don't interest us any more unless they ask for umpty steen billions of dollars. We've got used to big money now and this social safety thing that is only going to cost us 218½ million just makes us yawn. Two hundred and eighteen and a half million dollars! Bah! that's just chicken feed—small change—street car fare.

BUT THE PRESIDENT'S old age pension bill ought to have one good effect, anyhow—it will stop women from lying about how old they are. "Just a moment!" the old age pay clerk will say to an applicant; "you say you are entitled to a pension because you are old. But two years ago you said in an interview, 'We women under 30 must carry on this great work.' How come if you were under 30 two years ago that you are 77 now? Huh?"

CARTAPHILUS TO SALOME.

How hadst thou the heart to be
So desirable,
Surrendering this loveliness
Unattainable?
Brighter than the crown of Jove!
Deeper than the earth!
Ah, knowing well what madness comes
Of a lover's birth,

Thou didst bring such strange, sweet gifts
For my open palms
The gods were awed to silence when
They came asking alms.

Thou didst fling the doors of me
Open to the winds
And straight from heaven's seven gates
Peace was entered in.

Is my soul exchanged for naught,
Making peace secure?
How hadst thou the heart to say
That it would endure?
Thou who knowest hate to be
Swifter than the sword,
How hadst thou the heart to slay
With thy sweetest word?

SILVER IN THE SKIN.

FOR many generations miraculous curative properties have been attributed to the precious metals, particularly gold and silver. Solutions of gold were used as medicine for kings, and alchemists sought not only to prepare gold from the common metals but to place it in solution so that it could be taken as medicine. A generation or so ago the "gold cure" for drunkenness was hailed as a great discovery. Until recent years silver, particularly in the form of silver nitrate, was used extensively in the treatment of epilepsy and stomach ulcer.

Silver nitrate is used today as a cauterizing agent; weak solutions are occasionally employed to irrigate certain cavities of the body; and it is still the chief reliance of the physician in preventing inflammation of the eyes of newborn babes. Certain organic silver preparations are also used in the treatment of nose, throat, and urinary conditions; and silver is combined with arsenic in the treatment of syphilis.

Metallic silver occasionally finds its way into the body through the inhalation of silver dust or the handling of silver solutions, and whenever silver in the body is deposited in the skin the condition is known as argyria. The trouble lies in the fact that silver once taken into the body may remain there. The body finds the greatest difficulty in ridding itself of silver; and excretion of the metal, when it occurs, is exceedingly slow.

An early sign of the retention of silver within the body is a bluish line along the gum margin. This strongly indicates that there has been absorption of either lead, bismuth, or silver. If the use of silver preparations is not promptly discontinued the mucous membrane of the mouth, the skin of the face, and finally the skin of the entire body will gradually become discolored in direct proportion to the amount of silver that has been absorbed. Strangely enough, the darkening of the skin is more intense on the exposed portions of the body than on those covered by clothing. In cases of discoloration of the skin following the use of silver in the nose and throat it is assumed that some of the substance has been swallowed and absorbed by the gastrointestinal tract. In certain persons the steady use of a weak silver solution—for example, for the purpose of allaying bladder inflammation—has been followed by absorption sufficient to bring on symptoms of argyria. Some cases have been reported following the use of silver arsphenamine for the treatment of syphilis.

When the discolored skin is examined under the microscope, tiny black granules are found between the cells of the skin proper, and in extreme cases silver containing granules occur in the spleen and the lymph nodes.

Writing to this column some weeks ago, a patient described the typical symptoms of argyria. She stated that she had been urged to use a few drops of a black solution of organic silver two or three times daily in each nostril for sinus infection. Apparently she was relieved somewhat by the procedure, because she continued the use of the compound intermittently for two or three years. Her friends then noted that the skin of her face was becoming darker in color—rather grayish, although the pigment was not evenly distributed. The recommendation was made that she visit a physician for a careful examination. This was done and the diagnosis of argyria confirmed. The use of the silver preparation was stopped, but, as she reports, the skin of her face is plated with oxidized silver.

Fortunately, except in severe cases, silver in the skin results only in an unpleasant cosmetic effect; the patient is usually not constitutionally ill. Although some of the silver can be removed, the method is very tedious and somewhat painful. It is done by local injection into the skin of a solution that dissolves the silver and allows it to be carried off by the lymph stream.

INSOMNIA.

Miss B. S. writes: For the last two years I have been suffering from insomnia. Doctors have found nothing wrong with me. I am 32 years old, work all day in an office, spend two hours a day going to and returning from work, and keep house for my brother and my mother, who is an invalid. Though I feel tired all the time I am never actually sleepy.

REPLY.

You are carrying too heavy a load and no doubt have many anxieties. You probably are nervously exhausted. Although you have many duties and responsibilities it is quite possible that you are not obtaining sufficient physical exercise in the open air. If you can take a half hour's walk in a safe neighborhood before going to bed, physical exhaustion may come to your rescue. The more you lie awake the more will your nerves be damaged. If possible shift some of your responsibilities to others. Simple remedies that sometimes help are a tepid bath—not hot—before retiring, a glass of warm milk, and practicing relaxation.

CATARACTS.

Mrs. A. C. writes: What causes cataracts? At what age do people usually get them? Is there any treatment or medicine that will prevent them?

REPLY.

Children are sometimes born with cataracts. Fortunately this condition is not common. Old age cataracts are common. They usually appear after the age of 50 and represent a degenerative change in the lenses of the eye. The cause is unknown. Sometimes cataracts are due to general diseases, such as diabetes, kidney disease, and arteriosclerosis. Now and then cataracts occur among workmen who are exposed to great heat and intense light.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BERLIN.—Endowed with the power to relieve an employer from his post or to pronounce him temporarily or indefinitely unfit to head a business undertaking, the Nazi "courts of social honor," established a year ago, have resumed their activities. Tentatively, the first sitting of the National Court of Social Honor was fixed to take place on Jan. 18 [yesterday] in Berlin.

With the abolition of the socialist trade unions by the Nazi régime, the power of settling labor disputes has been transferred to the labor trustees, of whom there are thirteen in Germany. Whereas the labor trustees settle such vital questions as wage disputes, the courts of social honor handle offenses "against the honor" of employers and employed.

To date the court has dealt with 62 cases. In 13 cases a verdict was given. In 56 cases the proceedings were directed against employers. In 22 cases the employers were accused of wounding the social honor of their workers through harsh words, or, in some cases even through blows. In other instances the employers were charged with having exploited their workers, by paying below the tarif rates, through nonpayment of overtime.

In only six cases the employés were the accused, for such offenses as trying to disaffect their fellow workers, for provocative behavior, for unjustified complaints to the labor trustees and similar charges.

Of the thirteen cases decided by the courts three employers were found ineligible to head a business undertaking, one of them for six months and two indefinitly. The latter means that a manager will be appointed by the labor trustees to replace the employer pronounced unfit to keep his job. Two workers were sentenced to dismissal and two others were reprimanded. In the other cases fines were imposed ranging from $120 to $400.

SHARE IN ESTATE.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My father died in Michigan seventeen years ago leaving an estate. 1. If he died intestate, could I at this late date claim any share of it? 2. Assuming he left all to my brother, can I, under any existing inheritance law in Michigan, claim any part of it? 3. How can I find out what disposition was made of it? C. V. B.

1. It is extremely unlikely that he died intestate, or if he did that you can claim any share, but the answer depends in part on the facts as to adverse possession.

2. Not unless you can set aside the will for undue influence or lack of testamentary capacity.

3. Inquire at the office of the clerk of the court there.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

A popular idea is that the earth is slowly cooling off and will eventually freeze all living beings to death. The facts are just the opposite. Scientists say that the world is growing warmer—rather than colder—and that eventually winter and ice, along with snow, will be replaced by tropical weather. Of course, this change, according to scientists, will require many millions of years.

CZECHOSLOVAK PLACE NAMES.

New York, Jan. 14.—I hope you will allow me to correct the report of your Berlin correspondent published in THE TRIBUNE on Jan. 8 under the heading, "Three Nations Ban Old German Names of Cities." Speaking for Czechoslovakia alone, I should like to draw your attention to the fact that no proclamation has been issued in that country according to which, as your correspondent seems to suggest, "only local languages must be used in public proclamations." Similarly it is inaccurate to state that "Czech postoffices refuse to forward mail of any kind if the German names of municipalities are used instead of the new Czech appellations." The only order issued by Czechoslovakia in connection with telegraph and mail deliveries is that which regulates, for the sake of uniformity, the usage of telegraph addresses. Telegrams sent to Czechoslovakia should be addressed to their destinations in accordance with an official list of place names published by the ministry of posts and telegraphs and given to the disposal of both home and foreign telegraph offices. THE PRICE OF STEERS.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Jan. 15.—Your yesterday's TRIBUNE carries an account of sale by THE TRIBUNE'S experimental farm of some 44 steers, showing therefrom a profit of some $2,000 for the lot. I note in particular that the sale price per hundredweight was about double the purchase price, which accounts for a good percentage of your profit, and am curious to know whether or not the AAA is to be given any of the credit.

THE ISLAND AIRPORT.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—The committee investigating the airpor. in Lake Michigan has just decided that we cannot have it for "numerous" reasons.

If these reasons are all as lopsided as one of the five they enumerated in this morning's TRIBUNE we think the committee had better call in a referee.

One of the hard thought out reasons is that, if an island airport were built, it would "add to the congestion in Michigan avenue." How many cigarets would a fellow have to smoke in order to arrive at a "decision" like that? They admit right there that the airport would be popular.

Does the entire city have to stand for bonehead decisions "thought out" by a few? CARL J. INGWERSEN.

THE FIRST HORSE FLY OF 1935.

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 12.—Your paper of last Thursday carried a story about a farmer finding a grasshopper in one of his fields recently.

Last Wednesday, Jan. 9, in front of Girmans' meat market on Main street in Kenosha I was talking to my friend, Jack White [at noon]. A horse fly lit on his shoulder. I killed it to show him such an unusual visitation. That beats the sucker farmer.

INCIDENT IN AN ELEVATOR.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Ever notice how grumpy folks are on entering an elevator? Saturday I saw the usual sour faces getting a free ride, but I also witnessed a grand sight. The elevator operator opened the door to receive some more tomato faces when in swept a grand lady with a greeting "wie gehtes" to all. Immediately the T. F.'s ripened into a big smile. With a friendly bit of philosophy to those near her she descended and on leaving she bade us all "auf wiedersehen." It was Mme. Schumann-Heink, magnificence personified. We could set this old world on its feet again if we'd embrace such a wonderful personality.

HANDICAPPED.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—I have a son 19 years of age, height 5 feet 9½ inches, weight 173 pounds. He can only see out of one eye and for this reason he has been refused employment at a dozen concerns. This son of mine is an American citizen, can see well enough to play baseball, football; can drive a car, and still the corporations refuse to hire him. If everybody refuses to hire him how can he make a start in life and be useful to his country? Is he supposed to tote a tin cup and sit on the corners and beg for a living? He can see better out of the one eye than 50 per cent of the people can see out of both eyes.

P. J. S.

MORE CIGARETS, AND WHY.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—I read recently in the financial columns of your paper that the output of cigarets for 1934 established a new high mark. This can well be understood when one considers that people when nervous generally smoke more cigarets than when they are composed and that our citizens are in a nervous condition due to the times.

A MENACE.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Here is something that gripes me. On Jan. 4 about 10 o'clock in the morning I observed two milk bottles placed on the outside window ledge at about the eighteenth floor, Clark street side, of the Chicago Temple building. With thousands of people passing underneath it seems to me that this is a menace to the public safety. I called the office of the building to inform them of this menace, thinking I was doing them a good turn. I was advised by a young lady that it would be taken care of at once. Six days have passed and the bottles are still balancing precariously on the same window ledge.

FOES OF LONG START MILITARY TRAINING TODAY

Square Dealers to Be Held Ready for Action.

New Orleans, La., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Military training of Louisiana's civilian army, organized under the leadership of the Square Deal association to fight Senator Huey P. Long's dictatorship, begins tomorrow. The training program, which soon will be extended over the entire state, will be inaugurated with a drill of the Baton Rouge battalion at the Baton Rouge airport.

Arms will not be used in the training courses, but ex-service men and others with military training will give the recruits instruction in physical military maneuvers. Training of other Square Deal units along military lines will be undertaken within a few days.

Mobilization Speeded.

In issuing a call for the Baton Rouge drill, Louis Bourgeois, youthful state president of the Square Dealers, announced that the mobilization of companies throughout the state is being speeded and that the signed membership of the association, only two weeks old, now runs high into the thousands.

Particular efforts are being made to bring into the Square Deal army men who have arms at home and who are willing, if necessary, to sacrifice their lives that the ends of the association may be accomplished.

The association's plan of action is being guarded with the utmost secrecy. Leaders have announced they are primarily interested at the moment in perfecting their organization. They say they want the manhood of the state so organized and trained "that they can be mobilized instantly."

Allen Ignores Demand.

The Square Dealers have made it known, however, that it is their intent to reclaim the constitutional rights and liberties of which the people of Louisiana have been deprived "at any cost."

Gov. O. K. Allen ignored a demand of the association that he call an extra session of the legislature to repeal Senator Long's dictatorial laws. The deadline fixed for action by the governor was last Wednesday night. And it was Thursday morning that the Square Dealers announced their program of military training.

The Square Deal movement had its inception two weeks ago when a small group of Baton Rouge oil refinery workers, threatened with the loss of their jobs through one of Senator Long's oppressive laws, met to protest political persecution and to demand relief.

Two Manufacturing Projects Are Urged as Work Relief

Two projects for extending the manufacture of goods under the work relief program in competition with private industry were recommended to the Illinois Emergency Relief commission at its meeting yesterday at 1319 South Michigan avenue.

The larger project seeks the establishment of factories to produce wool blankets, lether coats, and stoves as a starter, beginning next month. Relief labor is already engaged in turning out mattresses and a wide variety of cotton clothing and bedding. In expectation of a wide expansion of such work, a survey has been made of 80 per cent of idle factories in Illinois, outside of Cook county, which will be canvassed later.

Reynolds Gives Approval.

Arthur R. Lord, director of work relief, made the recommendations for the two projects with the approval of Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive director of the commission.

Three idle factories would be rented under the larger project. Six months' "savings" would be $485,719, but this does not take into account the cost of relief labor or of materials furnished by the Federal Surplus Relief corporation.

The factories are those of the Hanover Woolen Mills company in Hanover, Jo Daviess county; J. A. Bubow, 1733 Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, and the Metropolis Stove Manufacturing company, Metropolis, Massac county. Rental would total $1,083 a month and repairs and additions $10,526. Approximately 222 relief "clients" would be furnished jobs, while 41 persons not on relief would be employed in addition.

Weekly Production Estimated.

Estimated weekly production would be: Blankets, 1,664; lether coats, 3,000, and stoves, 1,450.

The other project submitted to the commission involves a grant of $24,860 in federal funds to Independent Products, Inc., a "self-help coöperative enterprise" organized in Chicago last September by a minister. Of this project Major Lord said:

"It is the judgment of investigators that it should first bring its activities to an effective condition before asking for federal funds to expand."

The money would be used to assist operation of a sausage plant at 4500 West Cermak road and an apron factory at 160 North Wells street, and to purchase a stock of food which would be exchanged for labor.

ICKES CALL ASKS AID IN SPENDING 4 U. S. BILLIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes today issued a call for volunteers to aid him in planning to spend 4 billion dollars of federal easy money under the President's work relief program.

The call was issued before congress has sanctioned the program as an expression of the administration's confidence that the measure cannot fail to receive indorsement. In support of this confidence house leaders may plan to pass the program under the gag rule and pass it over to the senate by Tuesday night.

Secretary Ickes asked state and municipal authorities, planning boards, and other bodies to coöperate in a national inventory of works projects now being undertaken by the Public Works administration and the National Resources board. The purpose of the inventory is to obtain before March 1 information as to available projects in connection with the program, which is not to open until July 1.

In the issuance of the call Secretary Ickes was seen as making a bid to hold his place as the No. 3 man of the administration behind President Roosevelt and Donald R. Richberg. It is conceded in official circles that the director of the 4 billion dollar program will be the No. 3 man in the government.

To date President Roosevelt has given no indication as to his choice for the administratorship. At his press conference this afternoon the President said that the Ickes call could not be interpreted as indication of White House selection of the secretary.

Ickes and Harry Hopkins, Federal Emergency relief director, are considered the logical contenders for the position.

NORTH DAKOTA'S HOUSE VOTES TO IMPEACH MOODIE

Governor Says He Will Defy Action.

Bismarck, N. D., Jan. 18.—(AP)—A vote of impeachment by the North Dakota house of representatives against Gov. Thomas H. Moodie late today brought a quick defy from the chief executive, in office only 12 days.

Soon after the dominan Nonpartison league faction of the house rushed through its resolution impeaching the Democratic governor, he took steps to station National Guardsmen at the executive offices to thwart possible attempts of foes to seize the official quarters.

The governor's stand, he said, was based on the advice of Attorney General P. O. Sathre.

Is Political Foe.

Sathre, a political foe of Moodie aligned with the Nonpartisan group, ruled the impeachment action was "incomplete."

His opinion came as a surprise as he is prosecuting a quo warranto action in the state Supreme court to disqualify Moodie.

Sathre, whose opinion was informal, declared the house impeachment resolution to be incomplete until a board of managers has been appointed, and has submitted articles of impeachment to the bar of the senate. No further action by the house itself is necessary to complete the impeachment action, Sathre said.

Lists Official Charges.

The resolution charged Gov. Moodie with "crime, corrupt conduct, malfeasance and misdemeanors in office" but did not specify the violations.

The league majority, with sufficient votes previously pledged to carry out its impeachment plan, charged Moodie was not a citizen of the United States, and that he failed to meet the state constitutional requirement that a candidate for governor be a resident of North Dakota five years prior to his election. He was born in Canada.

HORNER ACTS TO SPEED BILL FOR JOB INSURANCE

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's message to congress on social security was "a splendid presentation of our duty on those questions," Gov. Horner said tonight as he prepared to put Illinois "in step" with the national program.

The governor concurred heartily in the spirit of the message, he said. Pending receipt of a copy of the commission report to the President which accompanied the message he directed Dewitt Billman of the legislative reference bureau to brief the latter document preliminary to incorporating portions of it in a bill.

Put Illinois in Step.

"I think you will find Illinois in step with the President's theme," the governor added. "In my biennial message to the legislature last week I presented my views on these important questions."

No such wholehearted words of approval as were uttered by the governor came from Earl B. Searcy [Rep., Springfield], minority leader in the senate.

"My frank judgment," Searcy said, "is that the Roosevelt program smacks entirely too much of federal paternalism. Let the several states do some of these things on their own. I favor states taking care of their own dependent children, health problems, crippled children, child welfare and public health matters. Before long the states are going to be so deeply in debt to the federal government that statehood will be swallowed up by federal obligations."

Sees Greater Extravagance.

"In the past," Searcy continued, "Illinois has always been able to take care of her special classes of unfortunates, and she still can do so. She can do it by economy in other directions. This federal proposal will but make for greater state extravagance, for politicians in charge of funds will figure that what the government takes over in expenditures the state can dissipate in other directions.

"The program contains certain projects that, in my opinion, are inevitable, such as a pension system, or its equivalent, for aged people. In view of disappearing investment values in late years I see no other recourse for men and women who have spent years in thrifty saving and taxpaying, only to lose all in a depression, than some such plan."

FATHER IS HELD AS BABY DIES OF MANY INJURIES

William Zeigler, 6039 Eberhart avenue, was held by Woodlawn police last night after his 13 month old daughter, Beverley, died in the Billings Memorial hospital from multiple contusions, broken ribs and a brain hemorrhage.

Both Zeigler and his wife, Jean Elizabeth, declared the child had been injured in a fall from a day bed, but Dr. Bengt Hamilton, who treated the baby, cast doubts on this statement.

"I noticed the baby Wednesday," he said, "the day after she was brought to the hospital. She was unconscious, there were hemorrhages under the skin all over the body, the body was bruised all over, the right jaw was swollen, two ribs were broken, and there was a possible skull fracture. I have never seen injuries of this nature from a fall from an eighteen inch high day bed."

An anonymous phone call to the polica have the story that the parents had beaten and mistreated the child, but both denied this at the opening of the inquest at the hospital. The inquest was continued to Jan. 29.

WOMAN ENDS HER LIFE.

Mrs. Gussie Carlson, 51 years old, committed suicide yesterday by inhaling gas in the kitchen of her home at 3810 Rokeby street. Police were told that she was despondent over her recent separation from her husband.

DECLARES PROFIT CUT 10 CTS. A TON ON RELIEF COAL

With the winter half gone, there will be a reduction of about 10 cents a ton in the dealers' margin of $1.88 on relief coal, as the result of repeated criticism of the code price fixed by NRA, it was learned yesterday. The cut, which becomes effective Jan. 21, was ordered by Washington NRA authorities in a bulletin sent to the Chicago code group for the retail coal industry.

The reduction is 11 cents on coal from central Illinois mines and 9 cents on fuel from southern Illinois. Since one ton a month is consumed on the average by each of the 140,000 relief families in Cook county, the monthly saving to the relief commision will be about $14,000.

Chicago code officials professed not to know the reason for the reduction. However, members of the industry said it was because of the pressure brought to bear on relief officials, which finally led them to file protests against the high fixed price with the NRA at Washington. The new dealers' margin of $1.78 a ton is still 40 per cent higher than that paid before competitive bidding was abolished by NRA.

BARKER IS TAKEN TO FACE ST. PAUL KIDNAP CHARGES

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Arthur ["Doc"] Barker, co-leader of the gang charged with the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, local banker, and the extortion of a $200,000 ransom for his return, sat in manacles today in a cell of the Ramsay county jail, after a secret airplane trip here last night from Chicago.

Department of justice agents captured him nine days ago in Chicago, but his detention was not made public until yesterday. During that period, it was learned, he was subjected to intensive questioning. The disclosure of this fact at Washington by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the justice department's bureau of investigation, led to suspicions that admissions by Barker led to the killing of his mother, Mrs. Kate Barker, and his brother, Fred, by federal agents Tuesday in Oklawaha, Fla.

According to the Washington reports, it was a few days after the questioning of Barker started in Chicago that E. J. Connelley, head of the department's gangster hunting squads, and a large force of agents were concentrated in Florida. "Ma" Barker and her son were killed when they shot it out with a force of agents who went to take them in custody.

Alvin Karpis, the former Chicago gangster who at 25 has been an inmate of three penitentiaries, and who was co-leader of the Bremer kidnaping gang, is believed to be in Florida and is the object of a widespread search there by federal agents.

SEIZED WITH HIS GANG, CONFESSES KIDNAPING PLOT

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Following the roundup by federal agents of his so-called Tri-State gang, Robert Mais, fugitive murderer and public enemy No. 1 of the Pennsylvania-Maryland-Virginia region, confessed here today that he had plotted a new series of kidnapings.

Simon S. Neuman, wealthy distiller of Bryn Mawr, Pa., had been selected as the first victim, Mais said.

The federal haul netted five prisoners—Mais, the leader; Walter Lagenza, his second in command; two gang members, Edwin Gale and Martin Farrell, and the woman, described only as Mary McKeever.

Mais, 29, and Lagenza, 41, had been sought since September, when they shot their way out of prison at Richmond, Va. Their escape, in which they killed one prison guard and wounded two others, occurred while they were awaiting execution for the murder of the custodian of a mail truck.

COUNTY PLEDGED TO PAY SHARE OF WATERWAY COST

The county board voted at a special session yesterday to post a $70,000 surety bond to guarantee that it will bear its proper share of the cost of condemnation proceedings to gain right of way for the Calumet link of the Illinois waterway.

A federal grant of $2,814,500 for widening and deepening the Calumet and Little Calumet waterways will be available if by Jan. 30 the government is assured none of the funds will be needed to purchase right of way. The city has appropriated $200,000 in its 1935 budget for the purchase and condemnation of land not otherwise obtained.

RED STEFAN

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH.

SYNOPSIS.

Stephen Enderby, an Englishman, had lived as a boy on the Russian estate of his stepfather, and grew up with the large brood of children of a peasant family. When his mother died he went to live with his guardian in England. After the revolution in Russia, as Stefan Ivanovitch, he became a "secret observer" for England, adopting various peasant rôles to hide his identity. Now Stephen has inherited the fortune of his guardian and wants to quit his hazardous work. He is escaping out of Tronsk when he meets and rescues Elizabeth Radin, the widow of an executed engineer. Though English her husband was half Russian. She is flying from the advances of Commissar Petroff, who is also after a secret formula of her husband's. Stephen takes her with him and tells her his history. They stop at the home of the grandparents of the peasant children Stephen had grown up with, who believe Stephen to be one of their many grandchildren. Stephen tells them Elizabeth is his wife and her name is Varvara. Irina, a beautiful communist, wanted Stephen herself and resents Elizabeth. Scenting danger, Stephen departs with Elizabeth for the border, stopping en route at Tronsk, where they are overtaken by Petroff and Irina. Stephen plans to outwit them by denouncing Elizabeth, claiming he never suspected her identity until she began to talk in her sleep. Petroff believes his story, as does Irina. Elizabeth is put in prison, thinking Stephen has turned against her. She is called before Petroff. Stephen is with him. Petroff dismisses all officers, wanting to do all the police business himself and keep Elizabeth. Then Stephen knocks him cold and ties him up. Stephen disguises himself and Elizabeth and they slip away to the railroad station. They travel by train to another village.

INSTALMENT XXX.

JUST ANOTHER REFUGEE.

Stephen said cheerfully:

"We are going to a house in the village. It's only a step. I've got out this way before when I didn't particularly want to be seen. By the way, my name's Nikolai here. I think you'd better be my widowed sister Anna. It doesn't matter much, because the people in the house we're going to can be trusted. You're not the first refugee I've run across the frontier."

That short, fierce flame died down. She was only another refugee to him. He would get her over the frontier because that was his business, and then he would go on his way and forget that she had ever existed. What a bitter, weary fool she was.

She spoke quickly to break the picture in her mind.

"Are we near the frontier?"

"As near as I dare take you. But there's no chance of getting over it anywhere near the line of rail. We shall go on by sledge tomorrow."

"Who's there?" "Nikolai," said Stephen, and they were let through.

They had come to the outskirts of the village. The snow on the ground seemed to give out a light of its own. Strange to have that ghostly light to guide them, with the sky so black above. The houses of the village were like beehives thatched with snow.

Stephen stopped at the third house and knocked, not upon the door, but upon one of the little windows that flanked it. Rap—rap—double rap—double rap—rap—double rap—rap. In the short silence that followed the whistle of the engine came to them and the chug-chug-chug of the departing train. As the sound died away the house door was opened a chink and a grumbling voice said:

"Who's there?"

"Nikolai," said Stephen, and at once the opening widened and let them through.

The door was shut behind them and barred again. A flicker of light appeared and the smoke of an oil lamp went up in a reek of soot.

An old man with a puckered face made a scolding sound as he adjusted the wick.

"Marya has no sense with lamps. When she trims them they always smoke. No women can trim a lamp properly."

By the smoky light Elizabeth saw a movement on the platform about the stove. A woman's voice said:

"What's that?"

A middle aged woman sat up and pushed back her hair.

"Is that Nikolai? Because if it is you're a fool to show that light. What a time of night to come here!"

She got down off the stove and came toward them, showing a broad good humored face above square shoulders and a short, sturdy frame. At the sight of Elizabeth she clicked with her tongue against the roof of her mouth.

"Lord have mercy—who's this?"

"You can call her my widowed sister Anna," said Stephen. "And you can give her something to eat and drink, and then you can let us sleep. Wait a minute and I'll just make sure that the light doesn't show from outside."

He stepped out into the snow and was back again in a moment.

"It's all right."

"Of course it's all right!" said the old man grumbling. "Should I have lighted it if it wasn't all right?"

After a meal of hot cabbage soup, black bread, and cheese produced by Stephen the lamp was put out again and they slept.

Elizabeth did not dream any more. She felt safe and warm and her sleep was deep.

It was still dark when Stephen woke up.

"I'm afraid we've got to start off again. I want to get away before there's any one about."

"How are we going?"

"I keep a sledge and a horse here. I've been up and down this way for years as Nikolai. I used to go around all these villages persuading people to go on to the collective farms. Did you see me speak to the G. P. U. policeman at Tronsk? He comes from these parts and would swear I was a red hot communist and a most useful comrade. It's a bit of a strain leading a double life, but if you do happen to want to disappear it's useful to have another skin to slip into. There's a pretty good collective farm not ten miles away that I helped to organize."

"Are we going there?" said Elizabeth.

He shook his head and whispered in her ear:

"We're going to the frontier, and the sooner we get there the better."

They drove out of the village in a dusk that was just beginning to break away. Snow had fallen during the night—— "And that means that no one will know where we left the train last night."

As the dawn came, Elizabeth saw a landscape broken by clumps of trees which here and there thickened into woods. There was an even gray sky overhead. The wind had dropped, but it was cold enough. She sat wrapped in sheepskins and wondered how often Stephen had driven this way before, and with whom. She had settled it with herself that she was just one of the refugees whom he smuggled across the frontier. He did it because it was his trade. If they were women he looked after them kindly, warmed them when they were cold, fed them when they were hungry, and rescued them when they were in danger. When he thought she was frightened he had patted her arm or her shoulder. She wondered whether he had done that to all the others. Probably. It was just his way of reassuring the silly frightened creature whom he happened to be looking after. She had found it rather an endearing way, but it ceased to be endearing when it ceased to be Stephen's way of comforting her.

She said after a long silence, "How many people have you taken over the frontier?"

He looked round at her with a laugh.

"I don't know. A good few."

"Men, or women?"

"Both—but more women than men."

"Young, or old?"

"O, mostly youngish. It's a bit too rough for the older ones. I did take an old lady over once, but I swore I never would again. She didn't really want to leave Russia at all, and every time we stopped she wanted me to turn round and take her back again."

Elizabeth let that pass. She was not interested in the old lady.

"Are they all your widowed sisters?" she asked.

Stephen laughed again.

"The old princess was my grandmother. She didn't like it a bit."

"He won't talk about the young ones," said Elizabeth to herself.

She said to him:

"Did all the others have to be disguised?"

"More or less."

"Did they all have warts on their faces?"

"No—it wasn't necessary." He stared at her. "What's the matter?"

"I hate them!" said Elizabeth vehemently. "Can't I take them off? No one knows me here."

"No, you can't take them off. They change you a lot. You'll have to stick to them till we are over the frontier. Why do you mind? There's no one to see you," said Stephen kindly.

Every business, we maintain, deserves an inventory once a year. With some folks it will be bolts of goods, dozens of dresses, or tons of coal. With us it's questions. It seems that like Mandy's hash they "jes 'cumulate." So today we're going to gallop down a whole line of queries which have come in this last year—not just once but many times—and see whether we can't get ourselves straightened out on some of the kitchen items which bother us. And now we're off!

Q.—What is Saint John's bread?

A.—Saint John's bread, sometimes called honey bread, carob bean, or locust bean, is a dark brown pod of the carob tree of the evergreen family. The pods are thick, sweet, about an inch across, and 6 inches or more in length. They are usually brittle and rather hard, containing a few dry seeds. They are most popular with people of Greek and Italian descent, being eaten both fresh and dried.

Q.—What is tripe?

A.—It is the thick, whitish inner lining of the stomach of a beef animal. It is thoroughly cleaned and is almost flavorless. We may buy two kinds, that coming from the first and that from the second stomach of the animal. The second is called honeycomb tripe and is the most desirable.

Q.—What are "shell protected" eggs?

A.—These are eggs which have been dipped in some clear, tasteless mineral oil or other compound in order to seal the porous shells. The act almost does away with evaporation from the egg and slows up the aging changes which would eventually give us a bad egg.

Q.—What is the difference between bottled lemon juice and fresh juice?

A.—The bottled juice, when just put up, tastes much like the fresh juice. After a period of storage, with most brands, there is a slight change which gives a liquid somewhat like lime juice in flavor. Some manufacturers filter and pasteurize the juice. There are no preservatives, and for that reason the bottled juice should be used in a relatively short time after it is opened.

Q.—What are cashew nuts?

A.—These are really not nuts at all, but the seeds of a fruit known as a "cashew apple," which grows on a tropical, sumac-like bush. The seeds are not in the fruit, but hang down from its lower end.

Q.—Does a rusty can indicate spoiled food within?

A.—No, unless the rust has so eaten into the can that a leak has been caused. Then bacteria will have a chance to enter and spoil the food.

Q.—How is a fish "kippered"?

A.—This word comes from the Scotch and refers to fish that has been prepared by splitting, salting, and smoking.

Q.—What is the meaning of "asparagus style" string beans?

A.—These are fine, long, stringless beans which are all exactly the same length as the can. They are stacked upright like asparagus tips.

Q.—What is the difference between a "cantaloupe" and a "muskmelon"?

A.—No more than there is between "rhubarb" and "pieplant." The names are really synonymous, although the contaloupe is often thought of as a small muskmelon.

Young Woman Can Influence Boy for Better

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"A boy acquaintance of my brother's asked me to go out with him. There's to be a big club party in February, sometime. There are to be many other boys I do not know personally. But I am told they get drunk and nasty when they have liquor in them. What shall I tell the one who has invited me to go?

"HEDE."

Your brother can do some inquiring around about the type of youth with whom your admirer associates. And no one can tip you off better than he. He can find out if your proposed escort is one of the gin-consumers, too, or if it is just his bad luck to have fallen in with such a group.

These days, even the boys of good families out on a party are anything but representative of good families when they drink. And this is what we'd like to talk to you young women about. Personally, we think you are far too liberal in your attitude toward the drinking escort. Sometimes, regrettably, the liberality is extended to your own conduct. You, too drink. We don't mean you personally, "Hede," but we just happen to know some young women who are anything but what young ladies should be out on parties.

They drink too much. They consume a shocking amount of liquor for their youth. For any age, for that matter.

Now, we think you young women have it in your power to change the regrettable liquor form of entertainment, too common. Naturally, you will have to start with yourselves. We don't especially recommend that you go about looking like reformers, nor wielding verbal Carrie Nation axes. But you can persuade your especial escort that he's not half the charming person under the influence of liquor you find him as a nice, sober young man.

You can tactfully suggest that parties where liquor flows freely enough to change the charming personality of a youth is not near so much to your liking as affairs where the principles of good conduct are observed. You girls plainly do not like the drinking bouts. You don't like to see your boy friends acting unlike themselves. So, why don't you try to do something about it?

Laughing about their actions, condoning them because all the others were the same way, isn't going to get for you near the respect that a hint on how you really prefer the youth would conduct himself.

Two Romances of College Days Revealed Today

Engagements Announced by Parents.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE fact that Yale university and Vassar college are within easy communication plays a small part in the two interesting engagements we are revealing today, for both of the young ladies are Vassar graduates and both of the young men, who are widely educated, include a diploma from Yale among their degrees.

Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Wells of 421 Barry avenue are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Margaret, to James Nevins Hyde, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cheney Hyde of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William Huse Dunham are revealing the fact that the announcement of the engagement of Miss Helen Stuart Garrison to their son, William Huse Dunham Jr., will be made at a tea at the home of Miss Garrison's brother, Henry Hotchkiss Garrison, in New Haven, Conn., this afternoon.

Miss Wells, who is leaving tomorrow for a round of visits in the east to last a fortnight, prepared at the Francis Parker school for Vassar. Recently she attended the Graduate Teachers' college in Winnetka. Mr. Hyde is a grandson of the late Dr. James Nevins Hyde and a grandnephew of the late Bishop Charles Edward Cheney of Chicago. He prepared at Choate for Yale. After his graduation he attended Cambridge university, England, where he was a student in Trinity college. He is now a student at the Columbia university law school. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Garrison Guest Here During Holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunham did not go east for the announcement of their son's engagement, but they are well acquainted with his attractive bride-to-be, for she visited them at Christmas time. Miss Garrison is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Ely Garrison of Greenwich, Conn., and she attended Westover school before entering the Poughkeepsie college.

Mr. Dunham, whose parents live at 1419 Judson avenue, Evanston, was a member of the class of 1923 at Yale and received his doctor's degree in 1929. He is assistant professor of history and fellow of Saybrook college in Yale. The wedding will take place at the close of the university session in June. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison will be at home from Florida by that time so the ceremony will be read in Greenwich, where they have a home on Pecksland road.

Yet another engagement that is being announced today is that of Miss Clara Stager, daughter of the John Stagers of Sterling, Ill., to Burnham Hockaday, son of Mrs. Rollins M. Hockaday of Kansas City, formerly of Chicago.

The announcement was revealed to their intimate friends at a dinner last night given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burdsall in their apartment at 747 North Wabash avenue. Mr. Hockaday was an usher at the wedding of the former Shirley Randolph to Mr. Burdsall a year ago last September. Mr. Hockaday is a graduate of Princeton university.

Richey-Mudge Nuptials Feb. 28.

Miss Virjean Richey and Burton F. Mudge Jr. have decided upon Feb. 28 for the date of their wedding. The ceremony will be a quiet one, in the afternoon, but whether it will take place in a church or in the apartment of the Eugene W. Richeys on East Delaware place has not been decided.

Miss Louise Brewer and Frank H. Wood Jr., who will be married a dozen days sooner than Miss Richey and Mr. Mudge—their wedding will take place Feb. 16 at St. Chrysostom's church—are being fêted at several parties. Joseph H. Belden Jr. will entertain at luncheon at the Saddle and Cycle club for Mr. Wood and his fiancée tomorrow, and the Niblack Thornes have planned a dinner for Miss Brewer and Mr. Wood for a week from tonight. It will be given in the apartment of the James Ward Thornes, Mr. Thorne's parents.

Brewsters' Guests to See Calder Circus.

One of the most interesting small parties of the week-end will be the supper Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster are having tomorrow evening

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Little Ruth Hendrixson, who will show off her blonde curls at the party and coiffure revue the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers association is having this afternoon. Chicago school children and their mothers are invited to be guests.

The hair styles committee of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers' association is saying "Yoo hoo, c'mon over!" to all the children in town today. They're having a party this afternoon at 2:30 in the Bal Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman, with their annual children's coiffure revue as the very special occasion. There's no admission charge and all small girls and their mothers are invited.

Children will model for the edification of children. The guests will see all that's new and nobby in hair arrangements for girls from 3 to 17 and Ethel Kenny, who is instructor in the department of hygiene at Lucy Flower Technical High school, will tell about the importance of careful grooming for the school girl.

Mothers will get some good ideas on how to arrange their small daughter's coiffures, in styles that are piquant but not adult and the youngsters themselves will get some salutary pointers on hair care. Seeing the swank children in long curls or short bobs, all pretty styles, with hair as lustrous as hair should be is calculated to make the most negligent little miss take better care of her locks.

Mrs. William S. Hefferan, member of the board of education, will be the association's special guest. The models will be Chicago school children.

A preview of the styles approved for children revealed a decided trend toward the glorification of the wholesomely youthful. There isn't a trace, thank heaven, of the too-grown up, which is always incongruous and in questionable taste. If the style committee has its way childish faces will be framed in hair arranged in charming childish fashion.

But you all must see this for yourselves this afternoon. It will be quite a nice party. ELEANOR NANGLE.

Special Finds Listed by Style Expert Today

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Finds for Saturday! The smallest things you buy to make your curls stay in place are bobby pins. Heretofore, fastidious shoppers have wailed about their unesthetic appearance and at last some smart lad has evolved a new trick, covered bobbies to shine unobtrusively but securely in your hair. These pins are covered with a shell-like composition, and are they a bright new addition for any shopper! You can find them clipped to a card in any notion department in town.

Next . . . the newest belts, stunning things made of woven wool in all bright colors and white, with large self-covered buckles. They are about two inches wide and can go south with white clothes or stay at home around the middle of bright colored wool frocks for immediate wear.

Also some wool and suede woven combines in belts for silk or wool dresses with metal buckles. New suedes with knockout big chromium buckles, the newest buckles being larger and brighter than ever. There is one with three distinct parts that clip together like a strapped polo belt. Another huge chromium oblong has slits with the suede pulled through. Bright blue, red, brown, and black are the colors of the suede.

Lots of frilly neckwear in snowy white is now available. Exquisitely sheer things with rows of fine Val lace with handwork and tucks. Cuffs to match make sets that do grand things for all your dark wool dresses. Vests are being revived, that is, the sheer white organdies with fine handwork or made of very decorative embroidered organdy edgings. They are tremendously effective with black and navy blue heavy silk crêpe dresses.

Plenty of colorful blouses to revive a jaded winter wardrobe! Huge checks, plaids and stripes with unusual necklines, short sleeves and most interesting price tags. They are, in most models, of crisp cottons and can be tubbed without a worry. They are slick buys for your two-piece suits to wear right away.

WEDDINGS

Lombard of Chicago announces the marriage of his sister, Miss Harriet Eleanor Lombard, of the Belmont hotel, to William Barreau Heuser, son of Dr. and Mrs. Herman Heuser, 1307 Ridge avenue, Evanston, which will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston. A reception will follow at the Georgian hotel. The bride is a graduate of Lake Forest college. Mr. Heuser is a graduate of Northwestern university.

Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Hamilton of Linton, Ind., announce the marriage of their daughter, Helen Louise, to Robert James Landrun, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Landrun of 1570 Oak avenue, Evanston. Mr. and Mrs. Landrun are at home in Ann Arbor, Mich., where he will be graduated from the University of Michigan in June. The bride is a graduate of Indiana university.

Una Holt Gets Lead in New Tarzan Movie

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Ula Holt, feminine athlete who appeared in Grantland Rice's sports shorts, has been signed as the feminine lead in "Tarzan" and "The Green Goddess," for location shots of which a technical crew is now in interior Guatemala.

Nina Mae McKinney, colored actress remembered from "Hallelujah," has been summoned from England, where she appeared in recent films, to play a singing part with Jean Harlow and Bill Powell in "Reckless."

As soon as Rex Larbow Bell gets a few months' start his mother, Clara Bow, and his daddy, Rex Bell, plan to transport him to their ranch at the California-Nevada state line. Clara says she is happier at the ranch than any other place, and thinks her son may want to grow up a rancher.

Spencer Tracy wants to pick up a reliable rabbit's foot because he feels "my number is up in our polo bunch." "So far I'm the only player who has escaped going to the hospital. Bill Branch, Frank Borzag and all the rest have got theirs while I haven't been scratched."

Tracy's employer, Producer Sol Wurtzel at Fox studio, heard of Spencer's misgivings and begged the actor to lay off polo while working on "Dante's Inferno," but Tracy already had been on the program for Sunday's polo match and was unwilling to walk out.

Then Wurtzel requested him to "take it easy" in the game. Tracy said he was sorry but there is "nothing like taking it easy in polo." "I've got to use all I've got to stay on the field with Will Rogers, Big Boy Williams and such men," whom Tracy's team is to play Sunday. The discussion ended with Wurtzel mournfully expressing the hope that his actor "will at least stay in the stirrups."

Francis Lederer was so exuberant at being assigned opposite Katharine Hepburn in "Break of Hearts" at Radio studio he bubbled over with words, just like the most ordinary of extras getting his first break in films.

W. C. Fields is the favorite comedian of the other film comedians in Hollywood. When the other comics pick a movie show to attend they generally hunt around for one of Juggling Bill's, if there is one available.

John Boles leaves shortly for a midwest personal appearance tour which starts with dates in Chicago and Detroit. Boles says he hopes to make practically his whole act the singing of request songs, instead of trying to develop some semi-vaudeville skit from situations taken from his recent film stories, as many of the touring actors do.

Sara Haden will play the character of Bottom's shrewish wife, a character Shakespeare himself never had in his fantasy, in the screen version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" as Warner Brothers and Max Reinhardt are recording the story on celluloid. Bottom is played by Jimmy Cagney, and Miss Haden thus achieves two distinctions, playing a character that represents the movies' "improvement" on Shakespeare, and being the first feminine player to put Cagney in his place in a film. In all Cagney's former movie stories, it was he who ran his lady friends ragged. Mary McCall Jr. and Charles Kenyon are the screen writers who wrote the character that Shakespeare never thought of into the play.

Fred Stone in Hollywood to Make His First Talkie

Hollywood, Cal. Jan. 18.—(AP)—Fred Stone arrived here today to act in the movies. "The old song and dance man and the musical comedy Fred Stone is put away in moth balls," he said. Under contract to Paramount, Stone will start his 51st year in the show business with a rôle in "So Red the Rose." He never has been in a talking picture, but was in a few silent films 16 years ago.

Good Morning.

You have to be "seasoned" in order to be a Bengal Lancer, or, in plain American slang, be able to take it.

"Lives of a Bengal Lancer," adapted from Maj. Francis Yeats-Brown's best selling autobiography of some four years ago, is a stern, thrilling photoplay, reminiscent of "Beau Geste."

The action all occurs in India, where the 41st Bengal Lancers, commanded by a grand old martinet, Col. Stone, match wits, lances and lives with wild and brutal hillsmen, commanded by the wily and unscrupulous Hamzulla Khan.

There are five people upon whom your interest and the plot hinge. They are Col. Stone, three young officers, Capt. McGregor, Lieut. Forsythe, Lieut. Stone—son of the colonel—and Maj. Hamilton, who understands perfectly and loves well his superior officer, whom he sometimes persuades to temper justice with mercy.

The action smolders, surges and flares in the vicinity of Khyber Pass.

Capt. McGregor, brave, hard-bitten, capable, and given to saying what he thinks on all occasions—a fact he often regrets—takes unto himself the office of mentor and nurseman to the colonel's lovable, weakling son, who, fresh from Sandhurst, gets no quarter at all from his father. Lieut. Forsythe, a cynical, kidding, able, and withal kindly "replacement" from England, has no end of fun over McGregor's devotion to his charge. BUT—

When the lad's ill advised activities result in the most tragic and cataclysmic consequences possible, Forsythe joins forces with McGregor; with him storms the enemy's citadel; with him submits to the most hideous of tortures through refusal to divulge the whereabouts of a certain munitions train and, after poor young Stone has given way under stress of fear and pain and told all, participates gallantly in a heart-stopping climax.

Here is speedy, colorful and human drama. The story unfolds swiftly, logically. It is tempered with humor, alive with suspense and executed with the apparent effortlessness that is proof of the nth degree of intelligent effort.

Four years it took Paramount to turn out this photoplay. At the start Director [Chang] Ernest Schoedstadt went to India and spent some $200,000 on background shots. In the finished picture only about 100 feet of these appear, because, at last, the film was located within but a few miles of Hollywood—and directed by an old time "western" megaphoner, Henry Hathaway, who was wheedled out of retirement for the purpose.

It is claimed that, altogether, four thousand actors performed in the piece before the finished version was ready for release.

Waste of money? Maybe—maybe not. Certainly "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" as is seems to justify time, money and changes that have been spent upon it.

A scene I will NEVER forget is that where Forsythe, playing "Mother Machree" dolorously on a horrible native instrument with the sole aim of annoying McGregor, who is in another room, charms a cobra to his side. . . .

"Keep right on playing . . ." says McGregor, entering, taking in the situation AND—doing nothing about it—for a time . . . ! WHEW!

Roof Fire Frightens 200 from Audience in New York Theater

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—A small fire on the roof of the Winter Garden theater, on Broadway between 50th and 51st streets, caused approximately 200 in the audience of 1,500 to leave the theater tonight and interrupted the performance of "Life Begins at 8:40" for half an hour. The fire did not cause any commotion among the audience and the 200 who chose not to remain filed out in orderly fashion. Firemen extinguished the blaze without much trouble.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Four persons were slightly burned and a near panic occurred in a back stage fire tonight at the Shubert theater. Starting in the backdrop on the stage, the flames burned most of the scenery and properties.

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

THE present practice of public knitting recalls the wartime era, so passengers in the elevated train yesterday watched with interest the woman whose needles were fashioning a sweater not unlike the olive drab variety that amazed, if they did not gladden, the heart of the doughboy. Her tongue clacked as busily as her needles, and her voice, as she described her domestic troubles, carried to the other passengers. Thus, doubly absorbed, she did not notice that her yarn had slipped to the floor.

No one else noticed it either until the woman shrieked in dismay. A portly gentleman, hurrying toward the exit, had caught the yarn on the button of his spat, and knitting and needles were swept from the woman's lap. Before he could be untangled the sweater had practically disappeared. There were those who witnessed the incident who felt that the gentleman's spat was really an effective instrument of retribution. He had been within earshot of her acrimonious discourse against her husband, and subconscious sex loyalty may have guided his feet into the yarn.

HOW crowded the dance floor was at the recent Emerson house ball is indicated by the fact that when her partner told Mrs. Edward C. Crossett a funny story, four persons laughed.

* *

THERE are several Stravinsky stories that are going about. One indicates, perhaps, the closed world in which a great composer lives, where the distractions that interest the rest of the world have no existence.

Igor Stravinsky has been stopping with the John Alden Carpenters during his stay in Chicago, spending much of his time practicing on their piano, by the way. A few evenings ago Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter entertained at dinner before the chamber music concert, and during dinner Gertrude Stein was mentioned. One of the guests turned to Mr. Stravinsky and asked in French if he knew Miss Stein.

"Quoi?" inquired the composer.

"Gertrude Stein," repeated his interrogator, certain that no further identification was needed. However, no light dawned on the countenance of Mr. Stravinsky.

"No," he answered. "Who is she?"

* *

AS you probably know, when Stravinsky's "Octuor for Wind Instruments" was performed at the Arts club Sunday evening, its first performance in Chicago, it was repeated, as the third and last number on the program, with Stravinsky conducting. A guest applauded vociferously at the end of the program.

"That's the only number I liked," he confided to a companion. "I didn't like the first one at all."

CHICAGO'S closest connection with the Hauptmann trial possibly lies in the fact that young Dick Cutter, son of Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of the medical school of Northwestern university and superintendent of Passavant hospital, came into possession of one of the Lindbergh gold certificates recently. When he got off the Europa and went to buy a railroad ticket to Chicago the ticket man looked at the bill he proffered, stared at him curiously, then disappeared for some time. When he finally returned to the ticket window he asked where young Cutter had got the money. When he explained that it had been given him by the ship's purser when he turned in his foreign money and after he had established his identity he was permitted to depart with his change.

Engaged

MISS ELIZABETH O'BRIEN.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Brien of Chicago and South Bend, Ind., announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Richard Carter Metcalf, son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Metcalf of Concord, Mass. Miss O'Brien is a graduate of Rosemont in Philadelphia. The wedding will take place the end of February.

Show Painting in U. S. from Earliest Date

Galleries Start with Stuart of Washington.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

One of the finest exhibitions of American paintings to have been held in town for some time may be seen in the exhibit of works from Gilbert Stuart to Robert Henri, in the Findlay galleries, 424 South Michigan avenue.

By dates the exhibition covers the years between 1770 and 1929. As a matter of fact, it does more than that, it throws a magic cloak of achievement over a passage of time which in most of our minds is clouded with wars and economic progress.

The United States were growing up in those years. It was growing up and it was doing it gracefully. In these paintings we can trace the development. First we see the Gilbert Stuart portrait of Washington, a brilliant canvas, known to have been owned by Gen. Washington himself. As a companion piece there is the Chester Harding portrait of Henry Payson Sumner.

George Fuller and William Morris Hunt pave the long run from 1822 to 1884. This is a period of beauty and demure charm. Technique was valued and a good craftsman was a sought after painter. The Hudson River school flourished.

Then we find William M. Chase and Twachman and Thayer, name after name of brilliant American artists, bringing us through the last of the nineteenth century and into the twentieth with acclaim. John Singer Sargent has an entrancing marine, a blending of gray water and sky, and one of the most exquisite still lifes you will find in a long search is the gemlike "Still Life" by J. Alden Weir.

George Inness is shown in his early period by "Delaware Gap," the most important small canvas by him in any collection. His large "Woodchopper at Dusk" is equally beautiful, and important, inasmuch as it is known as the last canvas he painted before his death.

Winslow Homer is represented by the most cheerful and insouciant sketch one could possibly credit him with—"Outlet Sawkill River." It is an Adam Emory Albright mood and fascinating. The "Landscape and Figure" by Arthur B. Davies is enchanting. The "Canyon Glory," by Elliott Daingerfield is superb.

The exhibition is filled with interesting and unique pictures. It will continue to Feb. 15 and is well worth seeing.

Ellen Fitz Pendleton to Quit as Wellesley President in June, '36

Wellesley, Mass., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, one of the most widely known educators in the country, tonight tendered her resignation to the board of trustees as president of Wellesley college, effective in June, 1936.

The board accepted "with regret."

The date of the resignation will mark the 25th anniversary of Miss Pendleton's installation as president of Wellesley, and the 50th anniversary of her graduation from that institution.

Miss Pendleton, 70 years old, was born in Westerly, R. I.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Two Romances of College Days Revealed Today

Engagements Announced by Parents.

with Sandy Calder and his circus for entertainment. Mr. Calder, a modern young sculptor, is to give a second formal exhibition of the circus under the sponsorship of the Renaissance society tonight at Wieboldt hall on the University of Chicago campus. Mrs. Brewster first saw the circus in New York City.

Many of the debutante crowd are invited to Thorne Donnelley's house tomorrow afternoon for a swim in his indoor pool to the accompaniment of Sammy Williams' music. Then there will be dinner, and after this Mr. Donnelley is taking his guests to the hocky game at the Chicago Stadium. He is giving the party for the two attractive nieces of Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin, Elroy and Jane Bradford, who are just back from a visit to the east.

Providing the Marquise d'Ivanrey is sufficiently recovered from a case of flu, she will go out to Lake Forest for a luncheon the William McCormick Blairs are giving. The marquise is spending the latter part of her Chicago holiday at the Whitehall.

Birthday Party for Two Lake Foresters.

As tribute to those two popular Lake Foresters, William H. Mitchell and Clifford Rodman, several dozen friends are showering them tonight with a collection of nursing bottles and baby blankets, crutches, and hot water bottles. The occasion is their joint birthday and their wives had the idea to give them a "Life Begins at Forty" party. (We didn't mean to give away their age!)

Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Rodman have divided the guests into two camps, asking one group to bring gifts that will make the birthday boys think of their youth and the other group to bring bounty that will remind them of approaching old age. A buffet dinner at the Mitchell residence will be followed by dancing at the Rodman house.

Because Howard F. Gillette, Charles S. Dewey, Robert F. Carr, Albert Lasker, Lawrence A. Downs, Homer Guck, and several others had such a good time last summer on a long golfing week-end at the Wisconsin farm of Charles S. Pearce, they are returning the compliment with a dinner for Mr. Pearce this evening at the Racquet club.

Skates Popular at Wayne Club.

Cold winds and rain have coated the countryside around Wayne with ice until, according to Leonid Remisoff, manager of the popular Dunham Woods club, the "natives" find it easier to skate to St. Charles than attempt the trip by car over the icy roads. Because of the inclement weather the ping-pong matches were not played Thursday night, but they will be played after dinner this evening.

Those in the finals include Mr. Remisoff, William S. Monroe, Harry Harper, Gove Compton, and Russell Cook. These contestants will be joined in the mixed doubles by Miss Jane Dunham, Mr. Remisoff's fiancée; Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Compton, Mrs. John Dole, Mrs. George Woodruff, Mrs. Milton J. Blair, Mrs. Walter Wood, and Mrs. Arthur Farwell.

J. B. S. Haldane is to have the speaker's chair this noon at the luncheon of the Council on Foreign Relations in the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer house. Dr. Walter Lichtenstein will introduce Mr. Haldane, who will discuss "Is There a Chosen Race?"

Mr. and Mrs. Talcott Griswold are entertaining at cocktails this afternoon for the former Jessie Beach Crane's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David Williams who are visiting them for a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are on their way from New York to Indianapolis.

Miss Anne Morgan and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt arrived in Chicago from New York yesterday. They will be at the Drake hotel for a few days.

Luncheon Today for Miss Vennema.

Miss Alice Jaques will entertain at luncheon today for Miss Marcelle Vennema, who is to become the bride of Anderson Ashley Owen next Wednesday evening.

Miss Eloise Tremaine, head mistress, and the faculty of Ferry Hall will entertain the students at Ferry Hall and their guests at a dance tonight which will begin at 7:30 o'clock. The school is in Lake Forest.

Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley is returning from the east, where she went to speak before the National Geographic society just in time to lecture in the blue and silver ballroom of the Women's Athletic club at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. In her talk, entitled "As We Were," she will give highlights on her fascinating African hunting expeditions.

During Mrs. Bradley's absence her daughter and new son-in-law, the young William Daveys, came through town. They remained but a few hours, however, as they were anxious to get out to Santa Fe, where arrangements are being made for the completion of their education at a western university. Mr. Davey's mother is Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, who with Mr. McCormick lives on a ranch in Santa Fe.

The Chicago Drama league will sponsor a preview of the motion picture "Man of Aran" at 10:45 the morning of Jan. 30 at the Playhouse theater. "Man of Aran" is an Irish film that was awarded the best rating of 1934 by the United States board of Review.

St. James League Elects Officers.

Looking to the future, the Woman's Parish league of St. James' church announces that it will have its annual bazar next fall the Tuesday before Thanksgiving. At the meeting at which this was decided Mrs. Dudley Buck and Mrs. Lyla Woodruff were elected co-chairmen for the coming year, with Mrs. Fremont A. Chandler and Mrs. Frederick Belknap as vice presidents.

Mrs. Karlton King is the new secretary and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr. treasurer. Members of the 1935 executive committee are Mrs. Duncan H. Browne, Mrs. Alan C. Dixon, Mrs. Royal Holden, Mrs. Albert Morrell, Mrs. Frank B. Mulford, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mrs. Orville J. Taylor, and Mrs. M. K. Wood.

As the result of balloting this week Mrs. Robert E. Cantwell Jr. is the new president of the combined Oak Park and River Forest Infant Welfare and the youngest woman ever to hold this office. One of her predecessors was Mrs. Telfer Mac Arthur, who is now the head of the Chicago society.

Henry Hooper's many friends will be sorry to hear that he fell and broke a leg the other evening when everything was coated with ice. Mrs. Hooper is in Palm Beach as the house guest of Mrs. Robert R. McCormick.

Miss Joanna Fortune will be at home tomorrow morning from her extended visit in the orient and Honolulu. Miss Fortune went to the orient last summer with Miss Harriet Monroe, who preceded her back to Chicago.

The cry Westward Ho! has reached several Chicagoans, all of them bound for Castle Hot Springs, Ariz. The Charles B. Goodspeeds are leaving the first of February to remain for the rest of the season. Mrs. Frank C. Knox and her sister, Miss Adelia Reed, will arrive there the end of this month for a six weeks' visit, and the Sterling Mortons will arrive about the same time.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton and their daughter, Miss Suzette Morton, will occupy the same bungalow at Castle Hot Springs which they have occupied for the last several seasons.

Attractive Caryl Ely, one of the most fêted of the season's debutantes, is leaving with her mother, Mrs. Jay Morse Ely, today for their home at Thomasville, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert White have returned from a midwinter holiday in Florida. After spending more than a week in Melbourne they went on to Miami.

Chicago Nursery Benefit

Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy Jr. is president of the board of the Chicago Nursery and Half-Orphan asylum, which is sponsoring an evening of fun at the Dixiana showboat on Friday, Feb. 1. The showboat troupe will present an old fashioned melodrama, "The James Boys in Missouri."

Paris Uses Plaits and Peplums to Soften the Lines of Its Spring Frocks

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The frozen stiffness is melting and running out of practical daytime clothes this spring. Softness in a simple dress that can be worn to business and for running about is dangerous, and can easily become mere mushiness, or senseless complication. Therefore, the Paris way of putting a bit of softness into the styles by adding plaited ruffles of the material and by introducing a peplum at the hipline is a good one, for it is compatible with a tailored look.

The model herewith is one of the new gentler dresses that are coming in. It is a two piece and is made of sheer wool in navy blue. The blouse looks something like a jacket and flares in a peplum below the semi-belt that begins at the sides of the waistline and makes a tour of the back, fastening on buttons. Plaited frills of the material edge the peplum and run a bit above the waistline. Another plaited frill trims the high collar and extends down the front to the breast. This collar may be worn open.

The skirt has two narrow set-in panels down the front, and a frill at the hem. It rises ever so slightly in a V at the center front.

Present Dance of "Future" for Benefit Fund

Strive for Picture Effect; Omit Story.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman, plus their concert group of dancers and musicians, appeared for the first time in Chicago at the Auditorium theater last night, presenting a phase of the art of the dance under the auspices of The Bohemians of Chicago and for the benefit of that organization's relief fund for musicians.

If their program represented a phase and not the whole art of the dance, it was certainly not the fault of the participants, for certainly there has seldom been a dancing organization so completely rapt and sincere in its efforts. It was this sincerity that won them an undeniable place in the affections of their patrons, for applause was vigorous and recalls following their numbers were frequent and continuous.

As a matter of fact they are extremely able exponents of what they were attempting to do, trained to a nicety, and projecting their evolutions not only with certainty but with a fine air of accomplishment.

One suspects, however, that their handicap lies less in trying to portray the dance of the future than in overcoming what they conceive to be the faults of the dance of the past. They gave an impression of being concerned with the same esthetic problems that were annoying the composers and painters and literary people of two decades ago, problems which these other creative artists have since either solved or agreed to lay aside and forget. Their very musical program indicated the fact. Medtner, and Malipiero, and Scriabine, and Villa-Lobos, and various others were important figures on the programs of 1915. They are less so in 1935.

So if this group believes that all story in dance should be abolished, that their dances of design and picture should be accomplished with less than the customary dance technic, that so highly moral a folk as the Shakers are best represented by bare feet underneath the Shaker hats and gowns, one longs for something definitly affirmative to take the place of these negatives, and one does not even pause to point out that the Shaker songs were a little off pitch.

At the same time the Humphrey-Weidman group constitutes a buoyant, and vital, and stimulating organization. They have ideas. One hopes that they will overcome a temporary delay on the course. The future is an attractive goal.

Miriam Hopkins Ill; Stop Work on All-Color Movie

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Miriam Hopkins, motion picture star, was removed to Good Samaritan hospital this afternoon, after being stricken with bronchial pneumonia. Her sickness stops production on an all color picture entitled "Becky Sharp." It was while working on this same picture that Lowell Sherman, motion picture director, was fatally stricken with pneumonia two weeks ago.

Many Moods of Child Forever Lost to Adults

But Parents Can Help Youth Preserve Happiness.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

They are singing outside my window—two 3½ year olds—that funny little singing of no tune at all, that just wells up from a sense of utter contentment.

Then I hear that loveliest of all sounds in the world—peals of laughter. I look out—but nothing special is happening. I've seen them do it before—just some word or spontaneous act and they're off. Nothing except a slim excuse upon which to hang their laughter—perhaps just a necessary chink through which to let their happiness bubble out. They must laugh—there is some great need for laughter, but they need some little spark to set it off.

Do you get a glimpse every once in a while of how far away we are from our little children in our power to understand their inner life?

Their world is small—time doesn't exist for them—little things are fraught with intense, vital interest—happenings small to us are great events to them—and they are, it is obvious, filled much of the time with a sense of peace and well being, and often a positive happiness, which to the average grownup is a rather rare experience.

When we say we get their point of view, it can only be in a groping and limited sense, where the 2 or 3 year old is concerned.

But we can, if we're sensitive and observing and caring, manage them so as to preserve their happiness and contentment, and guide them quite wisely through these early years of rapid growth and development.

Haddad and Halpin Win Miami-Biltmore Budget Tournament

Louis J. Haddad, director of the "Bridge Club of the Air" broadcast by W-G-N and recently elected president of the American Bridge league, yesterday, with his partner, Robert W. Halpin, won the third annual Miami-Biltmore pair championship.

Mr. Haddad and Mr. Halpin, both of Chicago, were two of the twenty-eight contract players representing a dozen districts of the country in which they survived elimination contests. About five thousand players competed in this tournament.

The trophy received by the winners is the Henry L. Doherty trophy.

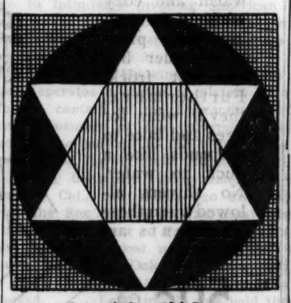
Attractive Quilt First Created in Southland in 1861

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.



Savanah Beautiful Star.

BY NANCY CABOT.

A simple yet effective pattern is the "Savannah Beautiful Star." The original quilt was found in a box of odds and ends in the attic an old southern plantation. In the corner was stitched the date, 1861, and a note attached with comments on the pattern, the quilting design, and the price of materials, together with the comment that the quilter accomplished approximately five yards of quilting an hour. An expert, I should say!

Another edition is out—Nancy Cabot's second book of quilts is ready. It contains 96 more illustrations of favorite quilt patterns, together with one complete pattern, "The Rose Basket." Price, 5 cents; by mail, 7 cents. Address Nancy aCbot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF VERY ADVANCED THREE-BIDDING.

If the ultimate refinement, the most delicate possible treatment of a very difficult slam angle following a three-bid does not interest you, do not bother with today's article; regard it as merely proving an academic point as dealing with a contingency which is unlikely to occur in any one individual's experience. Compare it, if you like, to the gilding of a lily. Nevertheless, it does illustrate a point of method, it does illuminate the deductive principle which underlies the entire structure of the three-bid and its probes, and I hope you will work through the reasoning which was employed.

What Actually Happened.

When we were discussing and testing out every angle we could think of in connection with the king-showing angle, it occurred to me that we had not discussed the case where all one's losers were in the same suit. Suppose that the partner has no ace to take care of that loser which cannot be eliminated by the king and queen of that suit, is there a way of finding out about that third loser? I determined to put a cold test without warning up to Derrick Wernher, who has specialized in the three-bid and all its ramifications. In connection with a minor suit it would not apply, as with only two losers one need not go beyond kings to know whether or not the second loser can be disposed of; also, if one bids spades, that is an easier angle, as now any denial can always be made at the same level as the probe.

Making the Test as Hard as Possible.

So I determined to make the three-bid in hearts and have my losers in spades. We were at the time discussing a far more elementary point, so I quietly put the following cards into his hand and said: "Bid this one for me, thinking aloud. We are partners; I am dealer and bid three hearts."

The responding hand:

Sp. A K Q x	Di. Q x x
Ht. x x	Cl. K Q x x

D. W.: "Gladly; this is easy. Three spades."

P. H. S.: "Four spades."

D. W.: "Five spades."

P. H. S.: "Five no trumps."

Truly a Process of Elimination.

D. W.: "That is a new one; I see you are trying me out and have thought of a situation which we have not yet gone into. Usually a bid in no trumps is a request to show another ace; however, if you had needed to know about the ace of clubs, you would have bid three no trumps over my three spades and could thus have got affirmation or denial of the club ace while still able to make the spade probe at the same level as you actually did make it. The same applies at the ace of diamonds. Also, you are not interested in the king of clubs; otherwise being, as I know, interested in the king of spades, you would have probed in clubs and thus given me opportunity [a] to show both kings at the level of four, by bidding four spades, or [b] to deny the club with a bid of four diamonds or hearts, still allowing you to probe in spades at the level of four. Why did you proceed directly to the spade probe when you could so easily have made other probes, including one for the king of diamonds at the level of four, leaving yourself still able to make your spade probe also at four? You are telling me that you are not interested in any manner in either minor suit; you are asking me to use my imagination and grasp that though I have not told you that I have no other ace, I am to respond as though I had told you so. I deduce positively that YOU HAVE NO LOSERS IN EITHER MINOR SUIT. How about trumps? Well, I have shown you the ace and king of spades, and since the latter card was shown in reply to a probe in spades, I now know that these two cards eliminate two of your three losers. What about the third loser?

"YOU CANNOT HAVE A LOSER IN THE HEART SUIT, otherwise you would have bid six hearts instead of five no trumps, in whichever form the heart loser might be:

"[a] If you lacked the ace of trumps, you would have the other high heart honors and know that I could not hold any one of them and that would be the only card which would permit me to take you to seven. You would have bid six hearts. That bid would be safe.

"[b] If your only trump loser were the king or queen, you would wish me to take you to seven if I held the missing trump honors, you would again have bid six hearts. Therefore your five no trump bid means that your last loser is in spades; that all three losers were in spades. As you have disclaimed any interest in other suits, only the queen of spades will give you a grand slam. You have at least four spades, otherwise the ace of clubs or diamonds would have served equally as well as the queen of spades, and you would have given me an early opportunity to show or deny other aces."

P. H. S.: "Correct. I did not think you would get to it." My hand was:

Sp. J 10 9 x x	Di. A K

Proper Balance Creates a Light Step, Good Carriage

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

How can a fat man be light on his feet while the little woman in the apartment upstairs comes down like a ton of bricks with every step?

In her book, "Your Carriage, Madam!" [John Wiley & Sons], Janet Lane tells why the little woman goes thump-and-galump while the fat man treads the boards with lithesome step. It's all in the way you distribute your weight and how you handle that body of yours.

The little woman upstairs makes her heels do all the weight carrying. This is an interesting study for all of us women: how both men and women come up and down on their feet. And the sounds that attend the galumper should be a sermon in stones—in heels, I mean.

You probably have laughed, yourself, when the heavy-treading footfalls heard before the person was seen turn out to belong to a gentle spoken creature and a girl or woman with all the other attributes of the femme charming. Listen anyway, and see what can be done about lightening the footfall. That's one end of you to look after.

Now, up to t'other end, the chin. Miss Lane reminds us how artists delight to paint a peasant girl, swinging along with a basket on her head. That's because in the perfect line-up essential to balancing it there she is the personification of grace.

"As long as her daily dozen consists in carrying home the wash or the marketing on her head," Miss Lane observes, "she'll never develop either a hip bulge or a double chin."

It all goes back to getting the three heavy sections of the torso: head, chest section, and pelvis—lined up over each other so that the laws of balance take care of the weight strain. Miss Lane explains. The flabby roll under the original chin curve isn't alway fat nor the first shadow of advancing years, Miss Lane tells, but merely overstretched neck muscles that have sagged out of place because of the wrong head carriage.

BASEBALL OUSTS DOGS FROM BRAVES FIELD

REPORT SALE OF WASHINGTON PARK IS NEAR

Nash Group Seeks Race Track.

From Florida last night came reports that a group of wealthy Chicagoans headed by Patrick J. Nash, Democratic boss of Illinois and Democratic national committeeman, will close a deal within the next few days for the purchase of the Washington Park race track in Chicago.

Two million dollars will be involved in the transaction, it was reported. "There will be a down payment of $500,000 with the other $1,500,000 to be paid within the next three years," said the reports from Florida.

The Florida reports further indicated that the Lincoln Fields track, also located in the Chicago district, may be included in the deal.

Winn Controls Track.

The Washington Park and Lincoln Fields tracks are owned by the American Turf association. Col. Matt J. Winn is president of the association, which also owns the Churchill Downs track in Louisville, home of the Kentucky Derby, and the Latonia track at Covington, Ky. This was a $10,000,000 corporation when it was formed back in the boom days.

Col. Winn in Chicago last night denied that such a deal had been closed.

"Are any of your properties for sale?" Col. Winn was asked.

"To be sure," replied the colorful racing general from the land of fast horses, beautiful women and mint juleps.

"We will sell any of them if we can get our price," he added.

Deal Still in Air.

Then Col. Winn went on to say: "So far no deal has been closed and I can't even hazard a guess as to whether one will be made. We are going ahead with our plans for a June meeting at Washington Park and the staging of a renewal of the American Derby."

Mr. Nash could not be located in Chicago last night. He was reported to be in Florida where his extensive Shandon Farm stable of race horses is campaigning at the Hialeah Park track.

Patrick Nash is a partner with his brother Richard Nash in the ownership of the Shandon Farm stable and the reports from Florida were not clear as to whether it was Pat Nash or Dick Nash who was in Florida and who had launched negotiations for the purchase of the Washington Park race track property in Chicago.

In Turf Limelight.

Since it was built near Homewood, 30 miles to the south of Chicago's loop, the New Washington Park track has been in the limelight.

It's originator was Thomas E. Bourke, who staged the famous $100,000 American Derby called by racegoers the "Shoestring Derby" when Col. Edward R. Bradley had to wait a few days to collect the $100,000 purse after his colt, Boot to Boot, had won the race back in 1926.

In the meantime Col. Winn, surrounded by a group of influential Chicagoans and Kentuckians, had moved into Chicago and had built the Lincoln Fields track, located just beyond the Cook county line in Will county.

Winn Takes Charge.

This track under Winn's direction immediately came into great favor among Chicago racegoers. It made money from the beginning and when it became apparent Washington Park could not operate longer without some quick financial assistance Winn and his group of Chicagoans and turfmen from Kentucky stepped in and bought the property in 1927. They have operated it successfully since then until last year when the track for the first time lost money.

The Lincoln Fields and Washington Park tracks are reported to have cost their present owners more than $5,000,000.

SALE IS EXPECTED

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Reports received here tonight that the American Turf association was ready to complete negotiations for the sale of the Washington Park track in Chicago did not come as any surprise to local American Turf association stockholders.

They pointed out that the Churchill Downs track reaped a profit of $270,000 at its spring meeting last year, during which the Kentucky Derby was renewed.

"This was the only track in the American association group to make money," a stockholder said tonight. "Losses at Washington Park, Lincoln Fields, and Latonia wiped out all of that profit," he revealed.

Chicago, St. Louis Bowlers to Vie for $1,000 Purse

A purse of $1,000 will be at stake in the intercity bowling match between the Pabst Blue Ribbons of the Classic league and the Herman Undertakers of St. Louis, which opens with three games tonight at the Lorraine Arcade, 810 North Cicero avenue. Two more blocks will be rolled tomorrow afternoon and evening, after which the teams will move to St. Louis for the last half of the series on Feb. 2 and 3.

LONDOS WINS AS MARSHALL HITS CONCRETE FLOOR

Challenger Misses Foe; Goes Over Ropes.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

James Londos the No. 1 rassler of this republic, returned in old time style at the Coliseum last night to defend that coveted heirloom of sport, the world's heavyweight wrestling championship. James anticipated no end of bother from his challenger, the earnest Everett Marshall, with whom he has had dealings before. The over-zealous Everett, however, spared him undue annoyance by putting himself out in 37 minutes and 3 seconds with a hold which defies technical description.

The evening came to its sudden conclusion to the mingled cheers and jeers of 8,507 paid customers, who paid $10,329 for the privilege of seeing Londos win with Marshall's able assistance. Dr. John Krone, the evening's host, was overcome early in the evening, when he chanced to peek out into the lobby and saw there hundreds of hands clutching bills, their owners almost begging to have them taken by Dr. Krone's agents. Within an hour the doctor was practically speechless at the happy response to the night's entertainment.

Wristlock Bothers Londos.

At the outset of the featured number on the program Marshall provided Londos with several trying moments, notably through the medium of a pesky wristlock. This irked James and he took to cuffing Everett about the chops. The latter answered this so stoutly that the champion took to his bicycle for about five minutes, much to the delight of the clients.

Finally Marshall began to build up the aeroplane spin routine, but James was of the same mind. Everett came dashing across the ring toward Londos, who was amost leaning against the south ropes. Everett then scaled the champion with such speed that he was catapulted over the top strand to the concrete floor, his head striking an iron brace when he landed.

Fails to Regain Ring.

Referee Ted Tonneman, one of the finest character players in rassling, then began to chant the 20 count, with gestures worthy of "Sheridan's Ride." By 14 Marshall had risen and at 17 he had struggled to a footing outside the ring and a grip on the ropes, but there he sagged, falling to the concrete again, and the evening was over.

Results of preliminary bouts follow:

Lou Plummer beat Joe Marsh [4 minutes 16 seconds].

Abe Coleman and Casey Birger drew [30 minutes].

Mehmet Yousef beat Thomas Marvin [16 minutes 29 seconds].

Ray Steele and Olaf Oleson drew [30 minutes].

LOU COMISKEY LEAVES FOR REST IN EAGLE RIVER

Lou Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, left last night for his wooded estate near Eagle River, Wis., to complete his training for the Sox training trip to the Pacific coast.

While in a hospital recuperating from injuries suffered in an automobile accident in New York on Dec. 12, Mr. Comiskey took off 18 pounds and expects to shed at least seven more while at his Wisconsin retreat.

HACK SIGNS AS CUB OFFICIALS HAUNT MAIL MAN

The Cub vigil, which has checked on every visit of the mailman to the Wrigley building during the last week yesterday was rewarded when the signed contract of Infielder Stanley Hack was received.

Hack, first of the Cubs to mail in his document and fifth to sign, forwarded his binder from Sacramento, Cal., where he is spending the winter.

Southwestern Coach Dies Following Heart Attack

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 18.—(AP)—A heart attack suffered while visiting here today ended the career of James R. Haygood, 54 years old, who had devoted his life to football in the south for more than 30 years. He was head football coach at Southwestern university, Memphis, Tenn., where for the last four years he directed athletics.

FIRST EXAMINATION FOR GOLDEN GLOVES BATTLES

Physical fitness is the primary requisite for entrance in the Golden Gloves tournament. First examinations for entrants in this year's tourney were taken by 450 prospective champions at Trafton's gymnasium last night. More boxers will be examined next week and each contestant is given a final check up by physicians before he enters the ring, also immediately after each bout in which he participates. Good luck, boys, and don't forget to duck! [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Ray Morrison Signs to Coach at Vanderbilt

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Ray Morrison, Southern Methodist university football coach, today accepted an offer to become head coach at Vanderbilt, his alma mater. Morrison will succeed the veteran Dan McGugin, who retired last fall to become athletic director.

Ringmaster of the S. M. U. aerial circus, Morrison will come to Vanderbilt with an excellent record. From 1922 to 1934, inclusive, when he was head coach at the Dallas institution, his teams won 80 games, lost 29 and tied 20.

Will Get $10,000 a Year.

It is understood that Morrison will receive a $10,000 annual salary. The length of the contract was not announced. One assistant, Russell MacIntosh, will come from S. M. U. with the new coach.

Morrison, who will arrive here early in February to take over spring practice, was quarter back on the 1909 Vanderbilt team.

The new Vanderbilt coach, who is a member of the national football rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic conference, went to Southern Methodist in 1915. With the exception of a few years during the world war, he retained the post.

Had Four Unbeaten Teams.

For six years preceding 1930, his Mustangs went through four undefeated seasons. In 1925 he started booking intersectional games and the fame of the Methodists spread.

The Mustangs in recent years have defeated Syracuse, Navy, Fordham, Washington university, Indiana, Oklahoma A. and M., Drake, West Virginia Wesleyan, and Missouri.

Kansas State Selects Williamson to Aid Fry

Manhattan, Kas., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Stan Williamson, head coach at Oklahoma City university and former center and captain of the University of Southern California, was named assistant football coach at Kansas State college today. His appointment and that of Back Field Coach Wes Fry, recently promoted to head coach to succeed Lynn Waldorf who is going to Northwestern, are subject to approval by the state board of regents.

Cavalcade on Coast to Run in Handicap

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Cavalcade, aptly named thoroughbred which raided eastern tracks last year, changed his winter address to Santa Anita Park today.

Undisturbed by the long train ride from Columbia, S. C., or the welcome of 500 racing enthusiasts, the "horse to beat" in the Santa Anita $100,000 handicap on Feb. 23, quietly moved into quarters.

Twenty Grand May Run.

The 4 year old dark brown son of the English stallion, Lancegaye, out of Hastily, found much activity in the string of stables where the greatest array of horses assembled at one track in many years is quartered.

Shortly after Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade entry had been bedded down, Bill Brennan, trainer of Twenty Grand, like Cavalcade, a Kentucky Derby winner, announced the 7 year old Greentree stable entry would go to the post tomorrow in the San Felipe stakes, a $2,500 added handicap—if it doesn't rain. Weather forecast: Probably showers.

Statesman Shows Speed.

On four previous occasions Twenty Grand has been nominated for his first race in more than two and a half years, only to have a heavy downpour keep him from the starting gate.

Statesman, great English thoroughbred shipped here from the British Isles for the handicap, worked a mile in 1:41 3-5 today.

GAMES TONIGHT.

Michigan at Illinois.
Wisconsin at Northwestern.
Indiana at Iowa.
Minnesota at Chicago.
Pittsburgh at Notre Dame.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Indiana challenges Iowa's basketball leadership in the Western conference tonight at Iowa City. Supporting this feature is Northwestern's battle with Wisconsin at Patten gymnasium, Minnesota's invasion of Chicago, and Michigan's game with Illinois at Champaign. Purdue, one of four Big Ten teams which have lost only one game so far, does not play until Feb. 2 while Ohio State waits until Monday to resume competition.

The game at Iowa City probably will be a battle of speed since neither the Hawkeyes nor the Hoosiers have shown exceptional defensive abilities. Indiana has beaten Illinois twice, at Champaign, 32 to 28, and at Bloomington, 42 to 29. Wisconsin whipped Indiana, 30 to 23, in the course of earning the best defensive record in the Big Ten at this stage of the race. Indiana's offensive average is 32 points as compared to a defensive average of 29 points.

Edge on Home Floor.

Iowa has won four games, beating Ohio State, 32 to 21; Chicago, 39 to 29; Northwestern, 38 to 35, and Minnesota in overtime, 39 to 33. Iowa's offensive average is 37 points as compared to a defensive average of 29½ points. The comparison between Iowa and Indiana is not conclusive because Iowa has played two second division opponents.

This may be the night Northwestern regains the form which carried it through six practice games undefeated. Northwestern turned in a splendid game at Purdue Monday only to lose in the closing minutes, 33 to 31. Coach Dutch Lonborg has indicated that his lineup tonight will be changed considerably. Al Kawal may not play because of a minor operation to remove a cyst from his right hand.

There is some possibility of change in the forward positions while Jess McAnally, who has been at center all season, may not be used if Wisconsin elects to start Stege, who can outjump McAnally. Otherwise the former Greencastle, Ind., High school center will be valuable in getting the tipoff notwithstanding his failure to bolster the attack.

Blame Badgers for Collapse.

Northwestern blames Wisconsin for beginning the recent collapse, for the Badgers held the Wildcats to a 6 to 6 tie in the first half of the opening game at Madison and then came on to win, 16 to 9. Northwestern scored only three field goals that night while Wisconsin could only notch one more, the other points coming from the free throw line. It's a likely guess that tonight's game again will be a test of defenses, with Wisconsin having a decided advantage.

Minnesota is expected to defeat Chicago although the Maroons may perform better on their home court than they have at Iowa and Purdue in their two conference games. Michigan's game at Illinois probably will result in a fourth defeat for the Wolverines, for Michigan has had difficulty with its offense all season.

Coach Franklin Cappon stuck to his guns and left Ann Arbor last night with a Michigan squad which did not include the five men suspended Wednesday for violation of training rules. The squad was made up of 11 players —"all we could round up," Cappon said.

The starting team against Illinois probably will be made up of Solomon and Joslin, forwards; Patanelli, center, and Myers and Evans guards. Others taken on the trip were Oliver, Rieck, Ford, Hill, Gee, and Everhardus.

LEAGUE FIXES BOSTON PLIGHT AFTER 13 HOURS

Fuchs Smiles at End of Session.

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—After sitting in session almost continuously for thirteen hours, club-owners of the National league emerged from their headquarters shortly before midnight with an answer apparently found to their perplexing Boston dog racing problem.

The solution was that there will be no dog racing at Braves' field, the Braves will continue to do business on their old grounds this summer and all that now remains to be ironed out are certain financial difficulties involving the Braves which the league hopes to have satisfactorily adjusted by the time of its regular spring meeting on Feb. 5.

Erase Dog Issue.

The dog racing issue, so far as it concerned Braves' field or any entangling alliance with the Braves, was virtually wiped out at the opening of the session in the morning when a resolution was unanimously adopted. The league placed itself on record as being opposed to allowing any of its clubs playing baseball on premises used jointly with the greyhounds. Both President Emil Fuchs and Vice President Charles P. Adams, representing the Braves, voted for the resolution.

This done, the magnates then tackled the involved financial status of the Boston club and so involved apparently was the problem that it kept the owners in session until midnight.

Sees End of Trouble.

At the close of the session, President Ford C. Frick, who presided over the special meeting, issued the following statement:

"The National league today discussed the entire Boston situation at considerable length and we believe there has been evolved a plan of procedure which will eventually work out successfully.

"The plan very naturally cannot be announced until various details have been completed. Judge Fuchs and Mr. Adams are returning to Boston tonight with the intention of seeing certain parties unrepresented today whose interests must be considered.

"The entire situation, we feel confident, will be clarified and definitly settled at the schedule meeting on Feb. 5. We believe that the Boston baseball public will be entirely satisfied with the solution of the problem."

Braves Sole Tenants.

The statement at first left the waiting baseball correspondents a trifle mystified, inasmuch as it made no direct reference to the Braves continuing at Braves field and President Frick, prior to issuing the report, made a special request to the newspaper men that they please ask no further questions.

However, when one of the writers pointedly asked Judge Fuchs whether he planned continuing at Braves field, he answered:

"Certainly we will continue at Braves field. As a matter of fact, the Braves have never been out of Braves field and while there still are a number of details which must be adjusted, I feel confident all will come out all right."

He denied flatly that any existing relations between the proposed dog racing project and Braves field could interfere with the decision that the Braves would occupy their grounds next summer as sole tenants.

League Provides Aid.

What financial difficulties remain to be surmounted before the Braves can be definitly said to be riding on an even keel again was not revealed. But the impression among local observers was that the situation apparently had reached a point where the league itself is ready to step in and lend what aid is needed to operate the club so that there would be no break in the ranks.

PACHO LIKELY FOE FOR FIRPO, SAGILIO WINNER

Dukelsky Matched with Babe Risko.

Negotiations were opened yesterday by Promoter Billy Cepak for Bobby Pacho, Los Angeles, Cal., junior welterweight, to fight at the Coliseum on Feb. 22. The winner of the ten round encounter between Frank Sagilio, Cicero, and Young Joe Firpo, to be presented by Cepak at Cicero stadium Feb. 8, will receive the assignment.

Leo Rodak, South Chicago boxer, arrived from Los Angeles, Cal., yesterday for his ten round lightweight bout with Tony Canzoneri at Chicago Stadium Jan. 31. He will start drills at C. Y. O. center this afternoon. Solly Dukelsky, Chicago middleweight, has been selected to oppose Eddie [Babe] Risko of Syracuse, N. Y., in another ten round match. Solly is due from New York today.

Puggy Weinert went four rounds yesterday with Eddie Carroll in preparation for an eight round battle with Laddie Tonelli at Marigold Gardens Monday. Carroll boxes Jack Lazar in the six round semi-final. . . . Bob Tinsley, who defeated Gary Baldwin in his professional debut last week, sparred two rounds with Young Rightmire for his four round engagement with Frank Keevil at Marigold.

X-ray pictures taken yesterday disclosed that Savior Canadeo, Catholic Youth Organization lightweight, suffered two broken ribs when the train carrying the C. Y. O. champions back to Chicago from Portland, Ore., was derailed. . . . Henry Fuscaldo, who was developed in Golden Gloves and C. Y. O. tournaments, will be unable to continue his pro career because of brittle hands. . . . Gus Rock, fight manager, sustained a broken right hand the other day when he beat up four would-be assailants. . . . Johnny Phagan, Jimmy Cummings, Everett Rightmire, Jack Elverrillo and Bud Shannon trained yesterday under the direction of Larry Amádee.

Davey Day's brother, Alexander Deitch, former boxer, and Miss Lillian Marcus of Minneapolis, Minn., will be married by a rabbi at a west side synagogue Sunday afternoon. . . . Day, Barney Ross, lightweight stablemate, worked out yesterday for pending matches. . . . So did Geno Salvatore, Le Salle, Ill. . . . Eddie Siegal, first manager of King Levinsky, has bought a share of Rudy Sterbenz's contract. . . . Davey White, idle for several weeks because of an injury to his left ear, has returned to action.

Georgie Goodman, Golden Gloves graduate, and Dave Berry, Springfield, Ill., featherweight, will meet in the six round main event at the Covenant club Thursday. Jack Elverrillo and Phil McQuillen, welterweight rivals, are paired for the five round semi-final.

Cleveland to Bid for Polo Title Tonight

With a chance of clinching the Metropolitan Polo league senior title, the Cleveland Riding club will oppose the Detroit Eagles tonight at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

The same situation will hold in the evening's opener, in the case of the Black Horse Troop trio that gallops against the Chicago Riding club in the junior division.

Both Cleveland and the Troop have won their first two league starts, and both have the hardest games of the season to win tonight. Lineup:

CLEVELAND RIDING CLUB.		DETROIT EAGLES.
A. Z. Baker	No. 1	Volney Bayley
W. D. Fergus	No. 2	Joe Dreager
Hank Evinger	Back	Percy Williams
BLACK HORSE TROOP.		CHICAGO RIDING CLUB.

Jack Armstrong	No. 2	Claude Mackey
Lieut. R. Keehn Jr.	Back	W. Collins Jr.

Referee—Capt. W. S. Everett.

HORNETS VS. 122D

The 122d Field Artillery will gain a clear title to first place in the Black Horse Troop Polo league if it defeats the 124th Field Artillery Hornets tonight at the Chicago Riding club.

Opening the program, the University of Chicago polo team will meet a trio from the Stalford Polo farm.

A game between a girls' polo team, the Tiger Lilies, and a trio of male poloists called the Centaurs, is also scheduled. The Tiger Lilies are made up of Betty Eckersall, Kay Drake, Blink Thomas, and Jane Ripley.

LANE TECH WINS FROM LAKE VIEW QUINTET, 31-19

Senn, Calumet and Hirsch Also Triumph.

Lane Tech, defending heavyweight basketball champion of the Chicago Public High School league, scored its second victory in the north section by defeating Lake View, 31 to 19, yesterday. The victory put the champions in a tie for the sectional lead. Annel, forward, starred for Lane, contributing three field goals and three free throws.

Senn won in another north division heavyweight contest. Senn, led by Read, who scored four baskets and one free throw, defeated Waller, 31 to 23.

Calumet Takes First Place.

Fenger dropped out of the undefeated ranks when it lost to Calumet, 42 to 28. Calumet now has undisputed possession of first place in the south section with two consecutive victories. Morgan Park, idle yesterday, is tied for second place with Hirsch, while Fenger occupies fourth position.

Schrik, Calumet center, led the attack against Fenger. He scored seven field goals and four free throws. Calumet led at the end of the first half, 27 to 10.

Hirsch made its first appearance of the season in the south division, defeating Harper, 44 to 28. W. Nelson led the Hirsch scorers, accounting for five baskets and two free throws. It was Harper's second league defeat.

Roosevelt Whips Schurz.

In the only lightweight game yesterday, Roosevelt defeated Schurz, 38 to 17, to remain in a tie for first place with Senn and Lane Tech. Lineups:

RIVERSIDE WINS, 28-27

Riverside High school's heavyweight basketball team defeated Glenbard, 28 to 27, in the final minute of their West Suburban conference game at Riverside last night. The victory enabled Riverside to enter a tie with Downers Grove, which defeated La Grange, 30 to 25.

Stolfa, Riverside guard, brought the team victory over Glenbard by sinking a long shot in the last minute of the contest. The score was tied, 26 to 26, before Stolfa made the winning field goal. In the final seconds Duncan, Glenbard substitute center, made good on a free throw.

An epidemic of measles at West Chicago forced the postponement of the school's double header with Hinsdale's lightweight and heavyweight teams. The date of the contests will be determined next week.

Glenbard and La Grange were victors in league lightweight games. Glenbard strengthened its lead in the pony division by defeating Riverside, 29 to 12, while La Grange eked out an 18 to 17 victory over Downers Grove.

York Beats Maine.

York's quintets triumphed over Maine in another league double header at Elmhurst. The lightweights won, 23 to 13, and the heavyweights, 30 to 28.

Waukegan suffered a double defeat at the hands of Oak Park in the Suburban league. The Oak Park lights scored a 37 to 28 victory and the heavyweights triumphed, 32 to 24.

Conacher, Hocky's Hard Luck Man, Comes Back Tomorrow

BY EDWARD BURNS.

CHARLEY CONACHER.

These little pieces about visiting hocky players printed in THE TRIBUNE from time to time originally were mapped out to form a series with the general title "Welcome to Our City." This morning's item is about Charley Conacher of the Toronto Maple Leafs, who comes to town tomorrow night, and the truth is he's much too efficient to be really welcome in so far as any one interested in the welfare of the Blackhawks is concerned.

Charley, hocky fans will recall, played in Chicago no longer ago than last Tuesday night and it was his solo flight and goal in the third period which broke a 2 to 2 tie and eventually gave the Leafs a 3 to 2 victory, their fourth over the world champs in as many games this season.

Boy, Does He Bang 'Em!

Conacher, kid brother of the famous ex-Hawk, Lionel, as most good fans know, generally is rated the hardest shot in hocky. This power, combined with skating speed and shooting skill has placed him at the top of both divisions of the National Hocky league in scoring this season.

This has been one of the happiest seasons of Charley's career, for he got through December without a serious injury, the first time in six seasons that a December accident hasn't mowed him down.

Conacher got his reputation as hocky's unluckiest player in the season of 1927-'28, when he was playing with the Marlboros of Toronto. That season he received one injury after another, even being laid out once when he collided with a teammate, Alex Levinsky, who will make his Chicago debut as a Hawk in tomorrow night's game. He also was repeatedly injured the following year, but carried on to captain his outfit to a Dominion junior championship.

Sick or Not, He's Good.

In the season of 1929-'30 he joined the Maple Leafs and scored his first National league goal in the first major league game he ever played, beating the late Charley Gardiner of the Hawks. In making the goal he received a body check from Taffy Abel, effects of which he still feels, he says. During that season he frequently was out with injuries and sickness and arose from a sick bed in the closing weeks of the season to score three goals in a crucial game with the Canadiens. He had to go back to bed before the season closed. After the season he submitted to a critical kidney operation just in time to save his life.

In December the following year, Conacher tripped in a game against Boston and fell, breaking a wrist. He was out for three weeks.

A year later, in December again, Charley broke two bones in the back of his hand as he crashed into the boards, and again was out three weeks. Nevertheless, he finished as runner up to his line mate, Busher Jackson, as the league's leading scorer.

His Breaks Are All Bad.

In December a year ago Conacher came to Chicago for a game late in the month. He remarked that after two more contests he would be through with his jinx month. He spoke too soon. In the game with the Hawks the Leafs had scored four goals within five minutes and were out to make it a dozen for the period. On one sally Conacher's skate hit Paul Thompson's skate and the 202 pound speedster banged into the end boards. His collar bone was dislocated.

Conacher last season led the National league in scoring with 32 goals and 20 assists for a total of 52 points. At the half way point in the current season he seemed in a fair way to top his last year's mark by a wide margin.

Conacher, like brother Lionel, is an all around athlete. He is 25 years old and thinks Lionel, eight years his senior, is the greatest man in the world.

McFadyen and Romnes Lost to Blackhawks

Dr. Hubert F. Meacham Blackhawks' physician, yesterday announced that Donnie McFadyen and Roc Romnes are suffering from shoulder separations. McFadyen's right shoulder and Romnes' left shoulder were injured in the game at St. Louis Thursday night, but until the team's return to Chicago the extent of the injuries was not known. There is little hope that Romnes can play for two weeks and McFadyen will be out for three weeks, if not longer.

There were two other minor injuries in the St. Louis game, Art Weibe suffering a sprained thumb and Marty Burke coming out with a charley horse. Both will be able to play against the Maple Leafs tomorrow night.

Injury to Romnes and McFadyen will not wreck the Hawks' front line combinations Morenz, March, and Gottselig, the first trio, are intact, as are Cook, Trudel and Kendall of the third line. The second line temporarily will be composed of Couture, Thomson, and Locking and it may not be necessary to recall any minor leaguers loaned out on option, unless there are more injuries.

WALDORF MEETS WRITERS; LEAVES FOR MANHATTAN

Lynn Waldorf, new football coach at Northwestern university, left Chicago last night for Manhattan, Kas., after attending a banquet at the Bismarck hotel, where he met sports writers from Chicago newspapers.

Waldorf plans to return to Evanston the latter part of next month to begin preparation for spring football practice, which starts March 1. The former Kansas State coach also will move his family to Evanston.

Prep Skaters to Race Today at Lincoln Park

The annual Chicago Public High School league ice skating meet will be held this morning on the south lagoon of Lincoln park. One hundred and one skaters will participate in the meet. The schools which will be represented and their entries are: Crane Tech, 27; Tilden Tech, 24; Schurz, 21; Austin, 16; Sullivan, 8; Lindblom, 4, and Roosevelt, 1.

RECORD FIELD OF SKIERS ENTERS NORGE A EVENT

The largest field of class A stars ever to enter an American meet will compete tomorrow afternoon when the Norge Ski club holds its 29th annual tournament at Fox River Grove, starting at 1:30 o'clock.

Thirty-five riders from the United States and Canada are entered in the feature event, with entrants in the senior, class B and class C events bringing the total to eighty-five. All in the Norge meet have presented outstanding performances in previous tourneys. Even the less skilful members of the Norge club have been weeded out of tomorrow's classic.

Sorensen, Sathre Arrive by Plane.

Two of the leading class A jumpers arrived last night when Harold Sorensen and Ottar Sathre came in by plane from Norfolk, Conn. The former is the eastern champion, and is known as one of the most graceful jumpers, while Sathre was an alternate on the Norwegian Olympic team of 1932.

One of the interesting highlights of the meet will be the appearance of the Bietilla brothers from Ishpeming, Mich. Walter, Leonard, and Anselm are entered in the class A event, and Roy and Paul, 16 and 14 years old, respectively, are in class C competition. Walter, 18 year old University of Michigan star, won the Oconomowoc title last Sunday.

183 Foot Record May Fall.

There is an excellent chance that the Norge hill record of 183 feet made three years ago by Kaare Walberg of the Norwegian Olympic team will be broken tomorrow. All jumpers upon whom the United States will depend for its Olympic team are entered in the meet, and all are anxious to compare their form with the flyers who will oppose them in the Olympic tryouts late in the season.

Snow for the meet was being packed firmly on the hill yesterday, and tomorrow the track will be in lightning fast condition. State routes 19 and 22 run directly to the hill for those who wish to drive, and trafic will be speeded by a corps of policemen. There is free parking at the hill.

Board of Education Ice Meet to Be Held Today

The annual ice skating championship meet of the board of education bureau of recreation will be held on the north pond of Lincoln park today. The midget and junior races will start at 10 a. m., while the intermediate and senior events will begin at 1:30 o'clock.

TAKING A HOUSE.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 18.—Friend Arch: Well, Arch, as soon as I received your letter saying you thought I better remain out here at least until after the Santa Anita $100,000 handicap, Feb. 23, we started to look for a little house and found one at a satisfactory rental about ten days ago.

Of course, I should have answered sooner with our permanent address, but what with the ponies, pro football, open golf tourney, my personal screen work and several previews which George Shaffer arranged for me to attend, I have been running around in circles with no time to write.

Our address is 2137 Whitley avenue, Hollywood. Please have Jimmy and Chuck make a note of it so if you want to send me any nice telegrams telling me how much you appreciate all the hard work I am doing for you, I will receive the wires promptly. Only please remember there is two hours difference in time, so if you happen to send a message at 1 o'clock as you go up to the Overset club for breakfast, it is 11 p. m. here and I might have gone to bed, although so far as I can observe no one ever goes to bed.

We had comfortable quarters in a nice hotel, but I wasn't sleeping well there and I'll tell you why. I asked the manager the rate for three persons and he said $5 per day. That sounded reasonable, so we had all our baggage from the car taken up, but after I saw our luxurious suite I became worried. It consisted of a large room with twin beds for the ladies, a reception room with inner door bed for me—only it was a reception room only in the afternoon, because I can't get up in the morning—a kitchenette, dinette, and ladies' dressing room.

All this seemed too much for 5 bucks a day, so I got to wondering whether the manager didn't mean $5 each per day, which would have meant $15. After that I couldn't sleep at night. I didn't like to ask him again lest he think either that I was a cheap skate or that he should charge us more. It turned out to be $5 for three.

So we started house hunting. First, the lady real estate agent showed us an estate which could be had for $75 per month, gardener included. I don't know why it was so cheap, because it also had a swimming pool, but I didn't want to buy any gold fish so that was out, especially as it would have required a maid, and Daughter Wake says she wants to do the cooking to gain experience for the future.

The next place just suited our purpose. It is a house on Whitley Heights, overlooking Hollywood, from which Los Angeles lights show at night. It's one of those places which Ed Burns doesn't like. It would be a bungalow, except that it's two or three stories high, according to one's computation. There's a double garage, of which we have half, on the street level.

Then up a flight of steps to the first or second floor, whichever you call it, to the living room. Then up three steps to the dining room—steps are the principal factors—and back of that the kitchen and ice box for milk if one uses milk, and at the extreme rear an incinerator and garbage receptacle, only you can't wrap garbage in newspapers like we're supposed to do in Chicago.

In this part of the house the furniture once belonged to Clara Kimball Young or Carrie Jacobs Bond—I'm no good on names but the ladies would know. After that a whole lot more steps to either the second or third story. The ladies have a large room with twin beds and bath, and I have a bedroom with shower bath, and a study or den which has a couch in it.

Now here's what intrigued me, Arch. From this study a private entrance leads down to a passageway which goes to the street and does not relate to the rest of the house at all. I asked the lady real estate agent what it was for. She looked at me rather archly and said: "It's just an old Hollywood custom, but it won't concern you. If you take this place, I'll give the key to this entrance to Mrs. Wake." Well, we took the house and Mrs. Wake has the key, and besides that there's a trunk standing against that outside door.

I was still curious, so I asked George Shaffer about it and he said: "It's just an old Hollywood custom," and he said it so sapiently I didn't like to pursue the subject any further.

Of course, I still wonder why any one would want to come up to my den surreptitiously when they could just as well come in the front door and meet the whole family. Furthermore, probably I'll never find out because Mrs. Wake has the key and there's a trunk against the door.

There's a lot more I wanted to tell you about, but Mr. and Mrs. Frank Compton and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gillfallan of Glencoe, stopping over a day on their way to Honolulu—remember you played in a foursome with Frank and Jack and me at Skokie—just telephoned and want us to come down to dinner in Los Angeles. I'm sorry they said dinner clothes, for the old tux doesn't fit so well round the midsection any more, but I'll try to climb into it and will write again soon. Hoping you are the same. Regards.

Harvey T. Woodruff.

SUBSIDIZATION OF PLAYERS UPHELD BY SUTHERLAND

Other Students Aided, Says Pittsburgh Coach.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Rising to the defense of subsidization in college athletics, Dr. John Bain Sutherland, head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, voices the belief there isn't anything wrong "in aiding the boys who play football."

Dr. Sutherland, called the "Silent Scot," was asked to give his opinion of the discussion over the country on the system of helping students who win recognition in athletics. He said:

"I don't care who is subsidized on my squad. As far as subsidization of players is concerned, it is getting no better fast, although I do believe it is not being carried on in the way it once was. For my part, I can't see how it is going to be prevented.

Had Some Help.

"Usually you will find the ones who are kicking the loudest are the ones who are merely covering up more than others.

"The boys working on college papers, members of the band and hundreds of others receive aid. I can't see any difference in aiding the boys who play football."

The coach's views were given before a meeting last night of the Young Men's forum, attended by a group of high school football players. The question of subsidization was put to Dr. Sutherland by one of the youths.

O. K. SOLICITATION

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Agreeing that solicitation "of the right kind" is a legitimate activity of colleges, the committee on recruiting of the Association of American Colleges today condemned certain practices regarding the treatment of athletes.

"Every institution," the committee said, "has a right to seek contacts with prospective students. The right kind of student solicitation will help a college to select the kind of student it desires to serve."

The committee, however, recommended in its lengthy report, filed with the secretary of the association without discussion, that athletes be treated alike with other students.

Elect Wriston President.

This report, the discussion of the progress made by colleges during the last two decades and the election of President Henry Henry M. Wriston of Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis., to succeed William M. Lewis, head of Lafayette college, Easton, Pa., as president of the association brought to a close the 21st annual convention.

"In regard to the recruiting of athletes," the committee report said, "we take this occasion to reaffirm the historic position of American educators that students who are athetes should receive no more and no less consideration than any other group of students.

"All students," the committee agreed, "should be treated alike as regards scholarships, grants-in-aid, loans and jobs. We believe that this historic attitude is sound and that athletes themselves would benefit greatly if all institutions would receive and treat them exactly as all other students. We recognize that this situation is an ideal rather than a reality."

WINS THOUSANDS

Because It's Ester Tested For MELLOWNESS Before Bottling!

THOUSANDS of whisky drinkers have switched to "BOTTOMS UP." Everywhere you hear people talking about it. In fact, although it was not offered to the public until just recently, its fame has spread from coast to coast and it is now sold in twenty-four states.

The success of "BOTTOMS UP" is no accident. The distillers did not offer it to the public until it was ready. It is a Kentucky Straight Whisky made by a formula famous in Kentucky for 65 years. A high percentage of expensive small grains is used, giving the whisky a distinctive flavor and quality all its own. Aging takes place in deep, charred, white oak barrels, stored in warehouses kept at summer temperature and humidity the year round. "BOTTOMS UP" is aged at least a full year before bottling. But no "BOTTOMS UP" is bottled until it passes the scientific "Ester Test" for mellowness. (Esters give whisky its finer qualities of fragrance, smoothness, and flavor and develop with age.)

"BOTTOMS UP" is a whisky for which you have been waiting—a great Kentucky straight whisky with the "plus" of assured mellowness. Try a bottle today! The price is so low it will surprise you.

Aged One Year

"Ester Testing" before bottling insures a definite standard of mellowness in "BOTTOMS UP" prior to its being offered for sale. Present bottling is distillation of December, 1933.

LLOYD HAMILTON, FILM COMEDIAN, IS DEAD AT 43

Ill for Months, Blood Transfusion Fails.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan 18.—(AP)—Lloyd Hamilton, whose antics in films brought mirth to millions of screen fans in the silent days of motion pictures and in the early talkies, died today of a stomach disorder.

Hamilton underwent a blood transfusion a few hours before his death. He had been ailing for several months, but became critically ill last night.

Aptitude for Dramatics.

Hamilton, inactive in pictures for some time, had been dogged by bad luck, including an accident which left both legs broken, failure of a café in which he was interested, and other financial reverses. He was 43 years old.

Born in Oakland, Cal., of nontheatrical parents, he showed an early aptitude for dramatic work and renounced an engineering education to devote his time to theatricals.

When he was 18 years old Hamilton went on the stage, beginning a career in the legitimate theater that took him up and down the Pacific coast in a stock company.

Second to Charlie Chaplin.

Five years later, in 1914, the motion picture industry made him an offer. In those early days he was a member of the famous Kale company, home studio of most of the famous stars of early motion picture days.

During all this time he had not yet attempted slap stick comedy, with which his name later became so prominently associated. As the tall, pudgy, baby faced "tramp" character of the well known "Ham and Bud" series; he reached proportions of renown second only to Charley Chaplin.

The comedian's mother, Mrs. Mary Hamilton, and a sister, Mrs. O. M. Judson of Piedmont, Cal., were notified of his death by his only relative in Hollywood, Mrs. John Bishop, a nice; wife of a film cameraman. The mother and sister were to come here.

Weds His Leading Lady.

Hamilton was married twice. He was divorced in 1925 from Mrs. Ethel Hamilton, known on the screen as Ethel Floyd. In 1927 he married Irene Dalton, once his leading lady. The marriage was short lived, however, ending in a divorce after less than a year. Miss Dalton died in Chicago about six months ago.

Hamilton completed a "talkie" about two months ago. Some of his best known pictures were "Real and Unreel," "Wide Open," a comedy version of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "New Moon," and many others.

RELATIVES GET $725,000 ESTATE OF H. S. WILCOX

The will of Henry Seward Wilcox, laundry machinery manufacturer who died Jan. 2 at Lakeville, Conn., was filed in the Probate court yesterday. It disposes of an estate valued at $725,000, all of which is left to relatives.

Mrs. Gretchen Wilcox Martin, a daughter, is the principal heiress. George B. Wilcox of Evanston and Theodore T. Wilcox of Albany, N. Y., were left $1,000 each. They are brothers of Mr. Wilcox. The will ordered the creation of a trust fund of $75,000 to be shared by Mrs. Anna Wilcox Stokes, 2459 Prairie avenue, Evanston, and her son, George Wilcox Stokes.

The rest of the estate was ordered placed in a second trust fund. From this Mrs. Katherine Brownell Wilcox of Lakeville, former wife of the testator, is to receive $4,800 annually, provided she surrenders into the fund a trust of $25,000 already in existence. The remainder of the income goes to Mrs. Martin, and she is empowered to dispose of the trust fund in her will, subject only to the continued payment of Mrs. Wilcox's income.

Mr. Wilcox was an officer of the Troy Laundry Machinery company from 1901 to 1928. He was 73 years old at the time of his death.

The following other wills were admitted to probate yesterday and filed with Clerk Mitchell C. Robin:

GRACE TROUTEN, died Dec. 10: estate $9,000, to brother and sister. Anna C. Sheldon, executrix.

ANNIE JANE JAYNES, died Nov. 30; estate $5,500, to three daughters. Maude Jaynes Stephens, executrix.

GEORGE HOWISON, died Dec. 6; estate $7,500, to two sons and one daughter. Arthur H. Tiedemann, executor.

FRANK BARKOWSKI, died Nov. 13: estate $6,000, to widow, four sons, and four daughters. Walter W. Sniegowski, executor.

CORA M. ELLARD, died Dec. 6; estate $5,075, to one son and one daughter. Ilma M. Richardson, executrix.

MARIE MARISKA, died Dec. 27; estate $12,000, to four sons and two daughters. Harry L. Mariska, executor.

Edgar R. Simpson Dies; Machine Company Head

Edgar Ralph Simpson, 46 years old, inventor and head of the Edgar Simpson Machine company, died in St. Luke's hospital Thursday of pneumonia. He was the son of the late William Simpson, St. Louis steel executive. Mr. Simpson resided at 244 East Pearson street. He is survived by relatives in St. Louis and a son, Thomas, who lives in Pasadena, Cal. Funeral services will be held today at the Graceland cemetery chapel.

Rites for Watson A. Yule to Be This Afternoon

Funeral services for Watson A. Yule, 65 years old, director of Fort Howard Paper company and of F. C. Huyck & Sons, Inc., will be held this afternoon from the chapel at 4227 Cottage Grove avenue. Mr. Yule, who had been identified with the paper industry for thirty years, died Thursday at Green Bay, Wis. He lived at 5805 Dorchester avenue. He is survived by his widow and three brothers. Burial will be at Aurora, Ont.

James Roach, 69, Pioneer River Engineer, Is Dead

Rock Island, Ill., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—James Roach, 69, who was a Mississippi river steamboat engineer during the rafting days as well as an engineer in the United States "mosquito" fleet in the Spanish-American war, died here last night. For thirty years he was engineer at the Rock Island water works.

GIRL, 18, AND SIX YOUTHS HELD IN 31 BURGLARIES

3 of Them Already on Probation.

CRIMINAL COURT.
WILLIAM KLEATS, robbery, sentenced to one year to life in penitentiary by Judge John C. Lewe.

Thirty-one complaints were signed last night at the Grand Crossing police station against a burglar gang composed of an 18 year old girl and six youths, three of whom are already on probation.

For more than two hours victims of recent robberies and burglaries viewed members of the gang at a showup and each one of the seven was identified one or more times. Police believe that before the cases come to trial the complaints may reach as many as a hundred.

The girl is Catherine Hopkins, 7155 South Chicago avenue. The youths are Frank Byrne, 18 years old, 7144 South Chicago avenue; Ralph Williams, 17, of 7114 Cottage Grove avenue; Earl Thomas, 20, of 912 East 92d street; Miles Hoff, 22, of 7160 South Chicago avenue; Lawrence Chelmont, 19 years old, and his brother, Norman, 18, both of 6604 Langley avenue.

Put on Probation in October.

Thomas and Williams were placed on probation last October by Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court after their conviction on charges of burglary. Byrne also won probation after his trial eight months ago for the theft of a watch.

Byrne, Williams, and Thomas were seized late Thursday night in the home of the Hopkins girl. Sergt. William Creighton, who had been assigned to clear up recent burglaries, knew that Thomas and Williams were on probation for burglary and knew Miss Hopkins.

The youths confessed their guilt, according to police, but denied that Miss Hopkins was implicated. Yesterday Thomas, Williams, and Byrne rode through the south side in a police squad car and pointed out 21 places that they had robbed.

One Held as "Fence."

"Thomas said that as soon as he and Williams were placed on probation they started on the round of burglaries," Sergt. Creighton said. "They teamed up with young Byrne and all three worked together."

Hoff, who is alleged to have served as a "fence" for the gang, was arrested in his home, where police found a gun but none of the loot. The Chelmont boys were arrested in their home, where police recovered a diamond ring which they had given to their mother for a present.

GLORIA ALLOWED $48,000; MOTHER TO SHARE $9,000

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—The guardians of the 3 million dollar estate of 10 year old Gloria Vanderbilt today were authorized to pay $48,000 of the 1935 income, estimated at about $125,000, to the child's mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Vanderbilt had asked for $51,910, submitting an itemized budget, but Surrogate James A. Foley reduced the allowance to the same sum as last year.

Moreover, the surrogate stipulated that $9,000 of the allowance was for personal use and directed that $3,000 be paid to Mrs. Vanderbilt's mother, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan. In the past Mrs. Vanderbilt has received $12,000 a year, from which she formerly made a similar allowance to her mother.

The court further stipulated that $1,500 be allotted to little Gloria's medical expenses and that the remaining $34,500 "be applied to necessary and reasonable expenses of the home maintained by the mother for the 'infant.'"

Mrs. Vanderbilt is required to submit itemized bills to the guardians for payment within a month.

Body of Jacob Greenwald to Arrive from West Today

The body of Jacob Greenwald, Chicago merchant who died Thursday in Los Angeles, will arrive in Chicago tomorrow and funeral services will be held Monday in the chapel at 3021 Fullerton avenue. Mr. Greenwald, who was 52 years old, had been president of the Diversey Store Fixtures company since its organization twelve years ago. He went to California with his wife a month ago for a vacation, and there succumbed to a heart attack. Survivors besides the widow are a son, Joseph, who lived with the family at 117 West Harrison street, Oak Park, and a daughter, Mrs. Helen Rosenthal, of Cleveland.

Joseph I. Childs, Drug Maker and Dealer, Dies

Joseph I. Childs, Chicago wholesale and retail druggist, died yesterday in the Illinois Masonic hospital following an operation performed last Wednesday. He was 60 years old and lived at 4245 North Ashland avenue. Mr. Childs was the owner of the Medinah Drug company, a retail store at 509 North Michigan avenue, and the Childs Drug company, wholesale pharmaceutical manufacturing plant at 223 West Erie street. Surviving are his widow and a daughter, Virginia.

DIES AFTER FALL AT HOME.

Edward Wolf, 73 years old, 4438 Wilcox street, died yesterday in the County hospital of injuries suffered three weeks ago when he fell in the rear yard of his home.

Mrs. Christine Bechtel Dies; Teacher 39 Years

Mrs. Christine McCowan Bechtel, who had been a teacher in the Chicago public school system for 39 years, died yesterday in her home at 7645 Eberhart avenue. She was 61 years old. She was one of the first teachers assigned to the Dewey school, and later she taught in the Mount Harlan school in Beverly Hills, where she became assistant principal. She retired three years ago. Mrs. Bechtel is survived by her husband, Frank. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at the home.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The boys at Lane Technical High school, 10,000 strong, have selected Mary Livingstone to be queen of their prom at the Aragon ballroom next Wednesday evening, with Wayne King providing the music. Miss Livingstone will dash out to the party between shows at the Chicago theater, where she, Jack Benny, her husband, and Frank Parker, radio tenor, are packing them in. The Benny troupe will appear on the same night as guests of George Olsen at the College Inn.

A tough schedule awaits them tomorrow. All morning they must rehearse their commercial radio show for tomorrow evening; then they make five appearances at the theater, go on the air from the Merchandise Mart at 6 o'clock and then there's a rebroadcast for the west coast at 10:30.

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting system, doesn't know it but his 19 year old niece is playing piano and singing over WBBM-CBS under the name of Lee Francis. And Thursday she saved the evening for a Michigan avenue restaurant when the orchestra engaged to play for a fashion show failed to appear. A swift search of the nearby CBS studios revealed her rehersing her next day's program. She was drafted to take the orchestra's place and she did a neat job of it.

Another romance has flowered in the WLS-National Barn dance troupe. Lulu Belle and Skyland Scotty, two headliners of the show, were secretly married last week. Their real names are Myrtle Cooper and Scotty Wiseman.

Every Saturday morning DeWolf Hopper goes to Chicago airport and flies to Kansas City for his broadcast with the Rhythm Symphony over NBC on Sundays. Monday morning he takes a plane and flies back to Chicago. But one foggy Monday recently the plane carrying Hopper couldn't find the field here and turned back and discharged the passengers at Joliet. It took the grand old man of the theater almost as long to come in from there as it had to fly all the way from Kansas City.

MRS. WILLETT IS DENIED CLAIM AGAINST ESTATE

Mrs. Grace Williamson Willett, divorced wife of Howard Willett, wealthy trucking contractor, lost her $1,000 suit against the estate of the late Attorney David D. Stansbury yesterday.

She contended that she paid Stansbury to prosecute her million dollar alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Mary Cave Hall, which was subsequently dropped, but that the attorney had never appeared in court in the case. Harry B. McEwen, assistant to the Probate judge, who heard Mrs. Willett argue her own case, ruled the money had been paid as a retainer's fee and could not be returned.

Mrs. Willett asked if she might sue the bank where the money of Stansbury's estate is deposited. McEwen advised her to consult a lawyer.

"No, thank you," Mrs. Willett said coldly. "I'm getting along very nicely by myself."

In her long drawn out marital litigation she was at frequent odds with her lawyers over their conduct of her cases.

SHARP CONVICTED IN MAIL ROBBERY; SEEKS NEW TRIAL

Ralph J. Sharp, a former assistant state's attorney, and Matt Finnerty of Green Bay, Wis., were found guilty yesterday by a jury in the federal court of Judge John P. Barnes on charges of possession of securities stolen from mail pouches and conspiracy.

Motions for a new trial for both defendants were made and set for argument Tuesday. If these motions are denied the defendants face possible maximum punishment of seven years in the penitentiary and fines of $12,000 each.

Sharp and Finnerty were charged with possession of and attempts to dispose of two $1,000 bonds stolen from a mail pouch at Neenah, Wis., on Aug. 14, 1934. Sharp, who entered a plea of not guilty and testified for the govplight. Finnerty took the stand and ernment, blamed Finnerty for his denied that he had known that the bonds were stolen.

SISTER'S ESTATE SEEKS MILLION FROM ELLWOOD

Will Ask Part of Cash Left by Promoter.

Sycamore, Ill., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—A single claim for $1,102,550.06 against the estate of William L. Ellwood, former De Kalb, Ill., and Texas realty promoter, will be brought before De Kalb county's Probate court here Feb. 11 by the estate of Harriet E. Mayo, a sister, it was learned today.

Of the amount sought $927,688.04 is listed as balance due on a personal note and the remaining $174,862.02 as interest accrued thereon between Oct. 1, 1930, and April 1, 1934.

Ellwood died Dec. 28, 1933, in Texas, victim of a heart attack. In his will of Sept. 19, 1933, he left his two daughters the entire $1,500,000 estate. They are residents of New London and Somersville, Conn.

Inventory of his estate, recorded here recently, revealed personal property valued at $394,037.89 in addition to more than 150,309 acres of Texas or Michigan ranch and farm holdings.

Oil Leases in Estate.

A number of city lots, oil and gas leases, a Lubbock, Tex., hotel, banking interests, and a share in his father's fortune not yet liquidated were further items in the estate.

Mrs. Mayo's son, Hessie Bonney, Attorney H. D. Fisk, and E. P. Ellwood, brother of the late promoter, are named executors of her estate.

JEREMIAH SHEA, WAUKEGAN CIVIL WAR VET, DEAD

Jeremiah Shea, 88 years old, 52 Fulton avenue, Waukegan, a civil war veteran, died in St. Therese hospital there yesterday after a brief illness of pneumonia.

Born in Newport township, near Wadsworth, in 1846, Mr. Shea had lived in Lake county all his life, except for the time he spent as a private in Company F of the 147th Illinois infantry in the civil war. His unit served most of the time in Tennessee on skirmishing and scouting duty.

After the war Mr. Shea lived on a farm near Wadsworth until 1894, when he moved to Waukegan. He and his wife, Elizabeth, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary last Oct. 22. Mrs. Shea and two sons, Harold and Leo, veterans of the world war, survive.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning in Waukegan. Silas Nichols, commander of the Waukegan post of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Homer Stevens, reported to be the only survivors of the civil war living in Waukegan, are expected to attend the funeral.

TWO WOMEN DIE OF AUTO INJURIES; 1935 TOLL NOW 31

Three deaths yesterday brought the 1934 automobile death toll in Cook county to 31. The victims:

Mrs. Tessie Spector, 52 years old, 350 South Keeler avenue. Died in the county hospital after being struck by a hit and run automobile at Keeler avenue and Jackson boulevard.

Mrs. Barbara Hrdlicka, 75 years old, of 2434 South Trumbull avenue. Died in the county hospital of injuries incurred when hit by an automobile at 25th street and Turner avenue.

August Senke, 44 years old, 6100 Gunnison avenue. Died in St. Mary's hospital of injuries suffered Thursday when his automobile collided with a street car in front of 5500 Milwaukee avenue.

Driver Kidnaped; Tobacco Truck and Cargo Stolen

Edmund Derdzinski, driver for the Reliable Tobacco company, 1422 South Halsted street, was kidnaped by three men yesterday and robbed of his truck and $1,700 worth of cigarets and tobacco. Derdzinski was stopped at 25th street and Wentworth avenue and forced into the bandit car with two of the men, while the third drove away with the truck. Derdzinski was released at 69th street and Hamlin avenue.

BABY FOUND DEAD IN BED.

Emma Lee Evans, three weeks old, 1524 Arnold street, Chicago Heights, was found dead, apparently of suffocation, in her bed yesterday.

LEO HASSENAUER REPORTED IN LINE FOR GREEN'S POST

Backed as U. S. Prosecutor by 3 New Deal Chiefs.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—A rumor that Leo J. Hassenauer is soon to be named United States district attorney in Chicago gained credence today when it was learned that he has the indorsement of three men high in administration affairs.

Hassenauer, now first assistant district attorney in Chicago, if appointed, will replace Dwight H. Green, Republican holdover, who has filled the post for the last two years. Hassenauer formerly was associated in the practice of law with Donald Richberg, NRA administrator, and with Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior.

Has Weighty Indorsements.

It was learned today that Hassenauer has the indorsement of these two men and of Henry Morgenthau Jr., secretary of the treasury. The Chicago Bar association and the federal judges sitting in the Chicago district also were said here to be ready to recommend him for the position.

The appointment of District Attorney Green, which came in August, 1932, never was confirmed by the senate, but he has been retained to complete important litigation pending when he took office.

ASSISTANT SINCE 1933.

Leo J. Hassenauer has held the position of first assistant United States attorney in Chicago since August, 1933. He prepared briefs and handled the legal end of the mail fraud trial of Samuel Insull. Before getting the government post Hassenauer served as special assistant corporation counsel in Chicago from 1923 to 1928.

A world war veteran, Hassenauer has been active in American Legion affairs. He was educated at Loyola university and at the University of Notre Dame.

He resides in Wilmette, is married and the father of four children.

FRANK HAJICEK, BANK PRESIDENT, DIES IN FLORIDA

Frank J. Hajicek, president of the Lawndale National bank since 1912, died yesterday in St. Francis hospital in Miami Beach, Fla. He was 60 years old. Mr. Hajicek went to Florida on Dec. 17 to recover from a goiter operation. Pneumonia was given as the cause of death. Mr. Hajicek's wife, Theresa, was at his bedside when he died. Other survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Triner and Mrs. L. S. Tichy; a brother, Rudolph, and his mother, Mrs. Marie Hajicek. The family home is at 2406 South Ridgeway avenue.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the bowels with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

Thousands who take Olive Tablets are never cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, dull complexion caused by constipation.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound, known by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with constipation and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two at bedtime for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

SENIOR ISSUES STEAL SHOW IN STOCK MARKET

Radio Shares Rise on Dividend Action.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 18.—Preferred stocks stole the show—what of it there was—on the share exchange again today. The fresh activity of the group was inspired by two rather impressive dividend declarations, one of the Radio corporation's board of $9.62½ a share on the company's preferred "A" shares and the other by the Associated Dry Goods corporation of $3 a share. The Associated Dry Goods payment was the first since June 1, 1932, and was exactly double that one.

The news on Radio sent the "A" stock soaring more than 5 points to a new high of 59¾, while the "B" issue, on which there are dividend accumulations of $16.25 a share, sprang into the spotlight and followed its brother pacemaker up for some 4 points. The low priced common was active, but gained only a fraction.

Old Rumors Recalled.

Incidentally, the Radio company's action, coming so closely on the heels of the report circulated last month to the effect that the corporation's financial plans had been postponed, caused many late holders who had sold out on the rumor to wish somewhat audibly either that they had been gifted with a talent for clairvoyance or that the company had seen fit to issue a denial of the costly reports.

It was rather widely guessed today that somebody better at forecasting than the rank and file had profited handsomely on the Radio affair.

The Associated Dry Goods preferred issues jumped 2½ and 5¾ points, respectively, on the good news from the company's directors' room. Other preferreds to rise 2 to 5 points or more included those of Otis Steel, the Fair, Ludlum, National Lead, Wheeling Steel, Barker Brothers, Mullins Manufacturing, and Certain-teed.

Inactive Issues Strong.

A small batch of stocks traded in at the inactive post also scored healthy looking gains on large dealings. Included in this list were La France, Type Founders, Barker, Budd, Schulte, Wright, and Universal Pipe.

Rails were neglected despite the sharp recovery in car loadings from the previous holiday week.

Westinghouse, ex dividend its Radio stock, was fractionally higher. Profit taking held down General Electric, the feature of the late trading yesterday and the subject today of rumors of new discoveries and inventions in the transmission of electricity and power.

Firmer quotations were the rule in utilities, motors, merchants and chemicals.

Some of the aviations looked up a bit in the early trading but wilted later.

SEC PROVISIONS NOT DIFFICULT, SAYS MATHEWS

George C. Mathews, one of the two Republican members of the securities and exchange commission, last night declared living up to the rules of the commission and the act under which it was created was a matter of reason and common honesty. The commissioner addressed a dinner meeting of the Illinois Society of Certified Accountants whose attendance was swelled to 500 by a number of visitors from the brokerage and securities business.

For the most part, Mathews confined his talk to matters of interest to the accounting profession, technicalities to the layman. He based his entire talk on questions submitted to him earlier. Without pause he "answered" for an hour and 15 minutes.

"It seems to me," he said, "that we have magnified security control questions out of all proportions. It is a matter of reason and honesty. Ask yourself if the information in question is something you would want to know if you were on the outside."

ILLINOIS MINES BOOST OUTPUT OF COAL LAST YEAR

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 18.—(AP)—Illinois mines produced 38,705,592 tons of coal in 1934, compared with 35,216,962 in 1933 and 40,032,974 tons for the five year average, Director James McSherry of the state department of mines and minerals announced today. Tonnage last year was the largest since 1931.

December production was reported at 4,431,164, highest since March, 1932, before wage scale negotiations and inter-union warfare handicapped the coal industry in the state. In December, McSherry said 162 mines worked an average of 18.6 days and employed 37,278 men.

FRASER TO GIVE UP SETTLEMENTS BANK PRESIDENCY

BASEL, Switzerland, Jan. 18.—(AP)—Leon Fraser, American president of the Bank for International Settlements for the last five years, will retire on expiration of his term next May. Fraser declined an offer of reelection at the meeting of directors of the bank Monday.

Fraser's desire to return to the United States was said to be his principal reason for withdrawing from the presidency of the bank. Friends said his plans for the future were indefinite and indicated he had not yet accepted another post.

It is believed here that another American will be selected to replace Fraser.

Radio Corp. Pays Arrears on Class A

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—The board of directors of the Radio Corporation of America, of which James G. Harbord is chairman, today voted a dividend of $9.62½ a share, the full amount of arrears on the class A preferred stock.

The dividend, which involves a disbursement of approximately $4,520,000 in all to holders of the issue, is the first paid since the initial quarter of 1932 when 87½ cents a share was voted. The payment on account of accumulations will be made on Feb. 19 next to holders of record Jan. 29.

Readjustment Defeated.

Readjustment of the capital structure, which includes besides the 495,597 shares of preferred A stock, 13,130,690 common shares, 767,275 preferred B shares and funded debt of $9,142,598, was planned late last year. A committee of directors was appointed to study the plan, but ruled against any change at that time. The preferred B stock, also cumulative as to dividends, carried on Oct. 1, 1934, arrears amounting to $15.

Earnings of the company last year showed a marked improvement over 1933. For the nine months ended Sept. 30 a net income of $2,177,771 was reported, equal to $4.39 a share on the preferred A stock. In the like 1933 period a deficit of $1,793,370 was recorded. An estimate of 1934 earnings puts net profit at $3,700,000, or about $7.50 a share of preferred B stock.

After the announcement of the dividend the preferred A stock rose about five full points, and, with the way cleared for dividend payments of arrearage on the preferred B stock, shares of that type also rose in value.

It was explained that the dividend of $9.62½ does not apply to the 100,000 shares of preferred A issued to the Rockefeller Center on account of modifications of Radio City leases on which the dividend will amount to $7.39 a share.

Mail Order Pays Extra.

Directors of the Chicago Mail Order company yesterday declared an extra dividend of 12½ cents a share in addition to the regular quarterly payment of 25 cents a share on the 346,181 shares of common stock outstanding, the entire capital of the company, it was stated. The dividends are payable March 1 to stock of record Feb. 9.

Business of the company during the first half of this month was about 25 per cent above the corresponding period of 1934, according to officers.

Association Dry Goods corporation today declared a dividend of $3 a share on March 1 to holders of record Feb. 7. This is the first dividend to be paid on this issue since one of $1.50 on June 1, 1932.

North American Oil Consolidated yesterday declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock. The stock has not been on a regular basis since 1931. In 1934 the company paid 80 cents a share, the last payment being 25 cents on Nov. 1. In the preceding year 20 cents a share was paid.

GOLD CURRENCIES STRENGTHEN AS U. S. BUYS METAL

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—The continued purchase of foreign gold by American banks which are now bringing more metal from France, England, and Holland today helped to restore the balance in foreign exchange operations. The French franc rose 1⅜ points to 6.58½ cents and other gold bloc currencies made similar gains. Sterling was unchanged at $4.88.

At the closing price of the French franc the dollar was worth $1.0074, compared with $1.0094 yesterday. The gold value of the dollar in terms of the franc was 59½ cents, compared with 59.62 cents yesterday and a par of 59.06.

The price of gold in London was raised 2½ pence to 142 shillings 1½ pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.67, based on the opening of sterling at $4.87¾.

A total of $9,000,000 additional gold was engaged abroad today for shipment to New York. This brings the total engagements since the current movement began to Nov. 5 last to $272,000,000 and total since the break in the leading foreign exchange rates in terms of the dollar on Tuesday to $45,000,000. The federal reserve bank reported receipt of $729,000 in gold at San Francisco from China.

WILLYS TO TAKE ACTIVE CHARGE OF AUTO CONCERN

Toledo, O., Jan. 18.—(AP)—A return to active business by John N. Willys, former motor magnate, in an attempt to rehabilitate the Willys-Overland company, once Toledo's largest industry, was seen today in his election as president of the company.

Willys, who started as an Elmira, N. Y., bicycle salesman, retired from active direction of the company in 1929 after selling his common stock holdings to a syndicate for a sum reported to have been $13,000,000. He retained his holdings in the preferred stock, however, and today the preferred stock holders gained control of the company, which has failed to pay preferred dividends for four consecutive periods.

Willys left Toledo to become ambassador to Poland. Since his return to this country he has been living in New York, but he is expected to return here May 1. The company, which employed 23,000 persons in 1929, has been in receivership since February, 1931, and the receiver, David R. Wilson, had been president until today's meeting. He has kept the company in operation, and it now employs 2,500.

Two Insurance Companies' Merger Plan Is Approved

New York, Jan. 13.—[Special.]—A plan for the merger of the Brooklyn National Life Insurance company and the United States Life Insurance company has been approved by more than two-thirds of the stockholders, assuring consummation of the deal, it was announced today. The new company, which will be known as the United States Life Insurance company, will have total assets of more than $7,000,000 and outstanding insurance of more than $40,000,000.

GRAIN TRADERS FOLLOW RISE IN FOREIGN MARTS

Wheat Is Up ½ Cent; Corn Also Firmer.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The interest of grain traders shifted yesterday from the American monetary situation to the foreign grain markets and a moderate advance in prices ensued. As values in Winnipeg moved a little further above the official minimum prices, and the Liverpool market staged a brisk rally, traders here bought gingerly and sent the price of May wheat futures up a half cent a busnel. Corn also was a trifle higher at the end of the day, but other grains showed little change.

The upturn in Liverpool wheat prices was linked to the news coming out of Argentina. An unofficial estimate by one news agency fixed the exportable surplus of that country at 140,000,000 bushels, or 17,000,000 bushels less than recently forecast in a government report. Stress was again laid on the high proportion of low quality wheat which the country has on hand because of the unfavorable conditions during the harvest.

Orient Buys Australian Wheat.

A revival in demand for Australian wheat from the orient also provided part of the background for Liverpool's upturn. The quality of the Argentine wheat has a direct bearing on the European demand for Canadian grain. European millers are currently blending Argentine and Canadian wheat in an 80-20 ratio. The percentage of Canadian wheat used in the mixture may have to be increased to as much as 40 per cent because of the low quality of the Argentine product, the Broomhall agency suggests.

The foreign outlook received more emphasis here than did the domestic situation. The prospect of a biting cold wave in western Kansas and Nebraska, where the winter wheat crop lacks sufficient snow protection against the cold, helped furnish the basis for the moderate advance.

Prices for May Futures.

Closing prices on May futures in Chicago were:

	Yesterday.	Thursday.	Wk. ago.
Wheat	.97⅝	.97⅛	.99⅝
Corn	.86⅝	.86½	.89
Oats	.52¼	.52⅛	.54
Rye	.62½	.68¾	.73½

The new crop futures in wheat did not share fully the strength in the May contract. July wheat closed unchanged and the September contract was an eighth of a cent higher at the end of the day.

The attention of the wheat trade is gradually shifting around again to Canada, which is regarded as the powder keg of the world market. The question of Canada's future wheat policy was brought to the front earlier this week when prices in the Winnipeg market fell to the minimum quotations which the government has fixed.

Canada Bolsters May Wheat.

Yesterday May wheat in Winnipeg closed 2¾ cents a bushel above the minimum price, and the July contract was 1⅝ cents above the peg. The strength in the May future is understandable in that the Canadian pool has decided to take delivery on its holdings of the contract and this naturally tends to cause covering of short commitments. Unless Europe begins to take Canadian wheat in much bigger quantities than it has so far this season, it appears unlikely that the government can pursue its present high price policy.

FDIC INSURANCE COVERS 98.39 PCT. OF DEPOSITORS

The Federal Deposit Insurance corporation yesterday announced that 98.39 per cent of all depositors in banks belonging to the corporation have their money fully insured. Because the limit of insurance is $5,000, however, only 44.44 per cent of all deposits are insured.

Figures for Illinois show 3,091,245 out of 3,141,406 accounts in 858 banks fully insured—or 98.4 per cent. However, only $1,030,279,000 or 37.23 of money deposited is insured.

In other states, part or all of which are in the Seventh federal reserve district, Wisconsin has the highest ratio of insured deposits—65.65 per cent—and 99.15 per cent of all depositors fully insured. In Michigan the insurance covers 98.8 per cent of depositors and 51.51 per cent of deposits. In Indiana 99.06 per cent of depositors and 60.29 per cent of deposits are covered. In Iowa 99.05 per cent of depositors and 65.04 per cent of deposits are fully insured.

FORD MOTOR CO. BRANCH PLANTS TO RESUME SOON

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 18.—(AP)—The Ford Motor company announced today that assembly operations would be resumed within the near future in the branch plants at St. Paul, Minn., and Memphis, Tenn. Resumption of assembly work in those plants will bring to fifteen the number of assembly plants in operation out of a total of thirty-four.

The announcement said that 2,400 men would be employed in the St. Paul plant and 1,800 in the Memphis plant, with first consideration to be given to local men.

Board of Education to Pay $2,813,000 of Tax Warants

The Chicago board of education announced last night that it will call $2,813,000 of 1932 and 1933 tax anticipation warants for payment on Jan. 26. The sum to retire them was accumulated during the last week. During the week an additional $2,018,800 of 1932 and 1933 tax anticipation warants was retired through their application towards payment of taxes by taxpayers.

Howell's Grain Deals Called Aid to Farmer

Thomas M. Howell, "mystery" grain trader, charged by the government with having cornered the corn market on the Chicago Board of Trade in 1931, was described by his attorneys yesterday as a public benefactor who lost a million and a quarter dollars through his purchases of 8,000,000 bushels, reversing a declining market.

Howell, who shunned the federal hearing personally, is being tried for alleged concealment of his holdings in violation of the grain futures act, through controling several accounts carrying various names and numbers. Defense attorneys admitted he held the grain, but declared the government was remiss in not taking action at the time.

View of Defense.

They assert the act applies only to current operations and that prosecution now is unconstitutional. Conviction of the charge would bar Howell from future trading on American contract markets.

The hearing, which ended yesterday, was climaxed by a question of Howell's attorney, Edward R. Adams, to Paul Mehl, statistician for the grain futures administration, who occupied the stand most of the day.

"Would you be surprised if I told you the whole transaction cost Howell in excess of a million dollars?" he asked.

"No. I wouldn't," was the witness' reply.

Howell's transactions on which the government bases its case occurred during July, 1931. During that period he acquired about 8,500,000 bushels of corn futures and large amounts of cash corn. Prices jumped from 57½ cents a bushel on July 20 to 72½ cents July 31, the final delivery day for the contract.

Testifies on Price Rise.

Mehl testified the price was artificial, emphasized by the fact that the spread between Chicago and Kansas City prices jumped to 25¾ cents. "The Howell corner in Chicago sent the price up very remarkably on the last three days of July," he said.

Counsel for Howell objected strenuously to reference to a "corner," a phrase which had previously not been used on the witness stand, as well as reference to a "squeeze."

The defense attempted to show Howell performed a public service by collecting 8 million bushels of corn during a market depression, which was followed by rising prices received by farmers and elevator men who sold actual holdings on the advance.

"Didn't he perform a public service in lifting prices from close to the lowest point in nine years?" Adams asked.

Indicates Public Benefit.

Mehl admitted Howell's activity in this deal did no harm to farmers or elevator men, but said:

"From an economic standpoint he should not have been allowed to carry such a long line."

The proceedings will now be transfered to Washington. The government has thirty days to prepare a brief, after which the defense has an equal length of time to reply. An additional fifteen days will be allowed the government for preparation of a rebuttal. The case then will be argued orally before a three man commission composed of Secretaries Wallace, Cummings, and Roper. An adverse decision to the defendant probably would be followed by court action, it is believed.

'100% NICHOLS' PLANS TO REMOVE HIS CASH FROM RESERVE BANK

J. M. [100 per cent] Nichols, president of the First National bank of Englewood, yesterday assailed the reported plan of the New Dealers to tighten control of the credit of the nation through appointment of reserve bank directors more friendly to the administration's fiscal policies. He sent his criticism to Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the federal reserve board and reported sponsor of the plan, and later announced his intention to withdraw excess reserves of his bank from the Federal Reserve bank. Nichols plans to remove all of his $2,000,000 cash reserves to Chicago loop bank vaults, except the $200,000 required by law.

"The enclosed article from this morning's TRIBUNE," wrote Nichols, "prompts me as a stockholder and part owner of the Federal Reserve to ask what in the name of common decency are you driving at in virtually throwing out those men lawfully elected to administer the affairs of the Federal Reserve bank, an institution heretofore reasonably free from political coercion. Have we no right at all? Are the politicians and ne'er-do-wells to take over every line of finance and industry? Apparently so.

"In the Federal Reserve bank we thought we had one safe place to entrust our funds, but if this too is to be converted into a political football I, like many other bankers, will begin to wonder about the safety of our investment.

"What is the reason behind such a move? Wasn't the Federal Reserve system getting along all right without your dictatorial supervision? If there was anything seriously wrong, why were not the members so informed?"

SHIP POOL PLAN BELIEVED AIMED AT U. S. FLEET

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A scheme that might put the idle fleet of the United States shipping board permanently on the scrap heap without compensation while other owners were paid for laying up their vessels was contained in proposals adopted today by the international shipping conference.

The conference, which ended its preliminary discussions by shippers of 16 countries this afternoon, drew up a scheme for an international pool to reduce the number of freighters and thus raise rates. Owners' ships in active service would pay a monthly tax on the basis of each ship's tonnage and from this tax the owners of idle ships would be compensated for keeping them out of commission.

One clause provides that no compensation shall be paid owners of idle ships which "cannot economically be put back into commission." It is understood that this clause would chiefly affect idle craft of the shipping board, especially in view of the use of the word "economically." It would be possible for the shipping pool to decide that the shipping board fleet could not "economically" be returned to service.

Morton State Bank Elects Same President 47th Time

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 18.—[Special.] Fred Reuling has been elected president of the Morton State bank of Morton, Ill. for the forty-seventh consecutive year.

Freight Trafic Rise Above Seasonal; Gain 55,602 Cars

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Freight trafic on railroads in the United States last week showed a more than seasonal gain of 55,602 cars, or 11.2 per cent over the preceding holiday week, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

The total for the week of 553,675 cars was 3,591 below the 557,266 cars reported for a year ago, a drop of one-half of 1 per cent, but 43,782 above the 509,893 cars moved in the corresponding week of 1933. The improvement over the preceding week was brought about principally by heavier movements in miscellaneous freight and less than car lot merchandise.

The seasonal year-end slump, amounting to approximately 122,000 cars was entirely wiped out by the gain last week, coupled with an increase of nearly 73,000 cars in the preceding week.

Canadian Bids for Silver May Be Treasury's

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—An inquiry for the purchase of 200,000 ounces of spot silver, which was received from Canada by New York arbitrageurs today, led to the belief that Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. might be operating through Canadian sources to acquire silver here.

The Canadian source offered a price of 54.2 cents an ounce at first, but advanced the bid later to 54.4 cents, it was asserted. Government buying agents are willing to purchase silver in any amounts at 54 9-16 cents an ounce, it was reported, but virtually none has been available at this price.

The price of bar silver in London today was 24 9-16 pence, off 1-16 of a penny, which would make the price 53.95 cents at the current rate of exchange.

Silver Higher in London.

When London silver is brought to New York the cost of transportation, refining, insurance, commissions, and loss of interest is generally figured at between ¾ of a cent and one cent, which would bring the price of London silver delivered in New York above the present government price of 54 9-16 cents a fine ounce.

Cable advices from London, nevertheless, report that between 10,000,000 ounces and 15,000,000 ounces of silver are en route here from England. This suggests to arbitrageurs that the treasury again is purchasing heavily in foreign markets. No one else could buy in such quantities, it was argued.

It was reported also that purchases of 7,000,000 ounces were made by the government in London last week. At present the only markets in which large quantities of silver are available are London, India, and China.

Silver Purchasing Lags.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—(AP)—It will take the treasury approximately nine years to fulfill the provisions of the silver purchase act of 1934 at its present rate of progress. This act declared it to be the policy of the United States that the proportion of silver to gold in the monetary stocks should be increased, with the ultimate objective of maintaining one-fourth of the monetary value of such stocks in silver.

When the act was signed on June 19, 1934, the stocks of government gold amounted to $7,834,460,000, while silver totaled $563,262,000. This meant that $2,048,224,666 in silver would have to be added to attain the goal. On Dec. 31, gold had climbed to $8,239,000,000, and silver to $817,000,000, still leaving a deficiency of $1,929,333,333 in silver stocks.

PUTS EDISON'S "GOING VALUE" AT 35 MILLION

Inclusion of $35,000,000 "going value" of Commonwealth Edison company for rate making purposes was urged yesterday by Albert S. Richey, engineer of Worcester, Mass., at the company's rate hearing before Charles C. Byrne, a member of the Illinois commerce commission.

"Some of the elements of going value which should be considered," said Richey, "are the value of a unified system, efficient executive organization, efficient operating personnel, attached business, seasoning of physical property, developed operating routine, past records, good public relations and good credit."

The company's presentation of evidence has been practically completed. All that remain are a few details to be presented to the commission on Jan. 25, the date of the next hearing. The commission will spend several weeks studying the mass data and will then start its cross-examination of the company's witnesses.

SWIFT & CO. MAY REFUND 5% NOTES TO CUT INTEREST

Swift & Co. is considering proposals for refinancing its $23,703,500 issue of 5 per cent notes which matures in 1940, William B. Traynor, treasurer of the company, disclosed yesterday. He denied, however, that the company has completed arrangements for the refinancing, as had been reported.

Although the issue does not fall due for several years the company has the right to call the notes at 101½ on March 1 if thirty days' notice is given to holders. One report said the company planned $25,000,000 of 3¾ per cent notes to take the place of the present issue.

If a new issue is offered publicly it would involve registration under the federal securities act and would be one of the first issues to be so qualified under the new forms issued last week.

Eccles' Policy Prepares Way for Inflation

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Gov. Marriner S. Eccles' move in cramming through the federal reserve board a new policy under which prominent industrialists serving as directors of the twelve reserve banks would not be reappointed is merely another step in the administration's program of getting the reserve system completely under the thumb of the New Deal.

With the administration calling for government expenditures of four and a half billion dollars in excess of estimated government income next year and with congress threatening to run the government even more deeply into debt, the New Dealers must sell billions upon billions of additional government bonds.

* *

The commercial banks of the nation already have tied up in government bonds as much of their funds as they had tied up in collateral loans before the stock market crash of 1929. Private investors are out of the market for such bonds pending assurance of stable money. The federal reserve banks have nine-tenths of their outstanding credit invested in government securities.

In the face of this saturation of its normal borrowing sources the treasury must borrow many billions more to fill the maw of the political spenders.

The federal reserve banks were originally established to provide a set of checks and balances, but they are rapidly becoming merely an agency for inflation in the hands of politicians. Under legislation passed in 1933 they have the power to buy government bonds without limit and then to print paper money secured by nothing more than the government bonds which they buy with the money they print.

* *

The schemes of the Rocky mountain silver inflationists and the Warren dollar debasers are pikers' dreams compared with the potentialities of this system of printing greenbacks and calling them federal reserve bank notes.

Mr. Eccles and his associates scoff at the idea that the program would ever be carried that far, but the fact remains that the administration a year ago promised a balanced budget in 1936 and that same administration now forecasts a budget for 1936 more out of balance than ever.

Mr. Eccles as governor of the federal reserve board is the hired man of the administration. If he has complete control of the federal reserve banks it is hardly conceivable that the federal reserve banks will stop buying government bonds as long as the politicians keep spending more money than they take in, borrowing the rest.

* *

Turning the reserve banks over to the administration, body and soul, therefore, means elimination of all checks and balances against political extravagance. The money well will be bottomless, because it will be limited only by the speed of the printing presses and the inclination of the administration to stop borrowing.

Even if the Supreme court should decide in the "gold clause" cases that congress acted unconstitutionally in abrogating the "gold clause" in contracts, and even if the administration should thereby be forced to return to a nominal dollar containing 23.22 grains of gold, there probably would be nothing to prevent the nation backing into paper money inflation via the federal reserve system as long as the reserve banks could be forced to print money with only government bonds as security.

* *

The reserve banks are already largely in the grasp of political powers. Yesterday it was learned that the chairmen of the different banks have been reappointed, with their resignations practically in Mr. Eccles' pocket. The stock of the reserve banks is owned by their members; that is, the thousands of ordinary commercial banks that belong to the system, but the government already owns one-fourth of the stock of commercial banks throughout the country, and it has other means of "cracking down" on them—through the bank examiners, through the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, and through the manipulation of money rates.

That leaves the reserve banks, and hence the nation's money, pretty well exposed to the chill winds of political expediency.

* *

Inasmuch as the reserve banks must be ready to buy government bonds as long as the government goes on borrowing, and the government has indicated its intention to go on borrowing until business takes up the slack in employment, the conclusion is inescapable that the only thing that can prevent ultimate drastic currency inflation and dollar demoralization would be a genuine and lasting recovery in business itself sufficient to put the idle back to work.

And yet the very fact that the government is borrowing billion after billion and thereby piling up an enormous additional tax load, which shortly will have to be borne by business, is a big impediment to the very business recovery which alone can prevent bigger impediments.

Some experts say the recovery has already begun and is strong enough to carry the nation over the growing hump. But in the meantime the machinery is being set up in the federal reserve system to provide printing press money if recovery falters.

UTILITY OFFERS REDUCED RATE TO END POWER FIGHT

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.—(AP)—One of New York state's largest utility companies, the New York Power and Light corporation, told the public service commission today it was ready to cut $600,000 a year from electric rates in the Albany zone. The proposed saving would be divided among 150,000 customers, a company representative said.

Mayor John Boyd Thacher of Albany, who has been fighting for lower rates, said he would continue with plans for a municipal power plant pending a careful study of the schedule. A bill for city power manufacture is being drafted for introduction in the common council.

The company is part of the Niagara Hudson system, of which Floyd Carlisle is chairman.

NEW DEALERS TIGHTEN GRIP ON RESERVE BANKS

Chicago Rediscount Rate Cut to 2%.

Another strategem of the New Dealers to obtain control of the nation's credit structure came to light yesterday, coincident with the announcement that the Chicago Federal Reserve bank had reduced its rediscount rate from 2½ to 2 per cent, effective today. That reduction, which is in line with administration policies and the downward trend of interest rates, was approved by the federal reserve board yesterday.

The other development was the revelation that the federal reserve board can call for the resignation of any of its agents at the twelve reserve banks at any time. While the reserve board, to all outward appearances, appointed agents to the different reserve districts for the usual one year term, it was learned yesterday that a gentleman's agreement exists in each case that the agents will resign at the board's pleasure.

Arrangement Explained.

The arrangement is explained officially on the basis that banking legislation during the present congress may so revamp the reserve system that the agents may be abolished or their functions be combined with those of the governor in each district. In any event the New Dealers did not want regular appointments to block their wishes.

Even now, however, four of the twelve banks are without agents. No appointments have been made to the vacancies in San Francisco, Kansas City, Cleveland, and Atlanta. In addition, the Cleveland bank is without a governor. Death caused three vacancies, resignation another, and in the Atlanta case the agent was appointed governor of the bank.

The first direct move of Marriner S. Eccles, new governor of the federal reserve board, to tighten control of credit through the directors of the twelve banks was revealed Thursday in announcement of the policy of not reappointing class C directors who have served more than six years. Three class C directors are named by the board for each district, one each year for three year terms.

Class A and B Directors.

Class A directors are bankers named by members of each district, while class B directors are business men and industrialists, also chosen locally. There are three of each, with terms expiring like class C directors.

As the New Dealers could have complete control of class C directors and still be in the minority in each district board, proposals to bring class A and B directors under central control are reported under consideration. However, as the agents also are class C directors, the "gentlemen's agreement" will hasten control of that group.

F. C. Ball of Muncie, Ind., president of Ball Brothers Glass company, largest manufacturer of fruit jars, is the Chicago bank's class C director hit by the Eccles ruling. He has been a director for twenty-two years, has not been reappointed, and is not expected to be. Reached at his home yesterday Mr. Ball said he had served a long time and "am not at all anxious to continue. I told them that in Washington." He did not care to comment on the Eccles plan to gain control. Mr. Ball is 77 years old.

Position of Simpson.

James Simpson, deputy chairman of the Chicago bank and chairman of Commonwealth Edison, Public Service of Illinois, and Peoples Gas, would be ousted by the policy at the end of the year when his term expires. With the resignation of Eugene Stevens, reserve agent here, a clean sweep of class C directors here could be made this year.

The rediscount rate reduction leaves only the Kansas City, Minneapolis, Dallas, and Richmond districts still on a 2½ per cent level. All the others are down to 2 per cent except New York, where 1½ to 2 per cent prevails. Locally the rate is the lowest in ten years.

EXPECT YOUNG TO RESIGN.

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—Owen D. Young will probably tender his resignation to the federal reserve board at once, in accordance with the policy of Marriner S. Eccles, friends said today. Young is in the south and could not be reached. Officials of the General Electric company refused to comment. At the reserve bank a ranking executive said any information given out must come from Washington.

N. Y. RESERVE'S DIRECT LOANS TOTAL $18,762,440

New York, Jan. 18.—(AP)—The Federal Reserve bank of New York today revealed for the first time details of its lending operations under the recently effective amendment to the banking law permitting it to make working capital loans direct to business.

In a communication to member banks George L. Harrison, governor, stated that the New York Reserve bank had received applications for loans totaling $40,723,135 from 560 applicants. Of these 138 appeals for credit had been approved and $18,762,440 loaned.

The loans which have been made to date, it was understood in financial quarters here, have ranged in individual cases from $300 to over one million dollars.

Atlantic City Is Selected for Rotary's 1936 Meeting

Directors of Rotary International selected Atlantic City as the location of the 1936 convention at a meeting yesterday in the headquarters, 35 East Wacker drive. The dates of the convention will be June 22 to 26. This year the convention is to be held in Mexico City from June 17 to 21.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL—Bleachable closed strong today, advancing 7 to 13 points into new high levels for the year. Total sales were 176 contracts. Houses with cotton and Wall street connections, as well as southern trades were the best buyers, while the offerings seemed to be supplied largely through profit taking. Crude oil was higher at 9¾c bid at all southern points. Lard closed firm and not far from new high levels. Extremely cold weather developing throughout the west and northwest was expected to bring about a much better demand for lard and many of the allied products. Bleachable spot, nominal; January closed 10.95c per lb.; March, 11.15c; May, 11.17c; July, 11.23c.

ROOSEVELT MAY PAY MORE HEED TO BUSINESS MEN

But New Bills in Congress Broaden Federal Power.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 18.—(AP)—A new method of dealing with business men and possibly a changed administration attitude toward them were seen today in the liaison committee organized by Secretary Roper.

Its establishment with the approval of President Roosevelt, Washington observers noted, was in distinct contrast with the cold reception the White House accorded a list of big business recommendations that emanated from White Sulphur Springs a month ago, including one for the creating of just such an agency.

Pondering the possibilities, observers meanwhile noted an administration request to congress for additional power in the field of business in the form of broadened authority to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Offer Bill to Prolong RFC.

A bill was introduced in both branches of congress prolonging the RFC's life until Feb. 1, 1937, and empowering it to make ten year instead of five year loans, to buy or guarantee railroad obligations, including equipment trust certificates, and to purchase any or all the assets of closed banks.

In addition the measure would increase the corporation's funds for the assistance of insurance companies by $25,000,000, raising them from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000, permit the RFC to make loans running until Jan. 31, 1945, and to purchase or guarantee railroad obligations, including equipment trust certificates, and give the corporation authority to purchase "any portion of, as well as all of, the assets of closed banks."

The bill also would continue the import-export banks and the Commodity Credit corporation until 1937.

Seek New Funds for HOLC.

Coincidentally, the President reported new funds would be sought for the Home Owners' Loan corporation. No definite figure was set, but a billion dollar request appeared likely.

The advisory committee, formed by Roper to keep the administration advised of business sentiment by contact through the cabinet, was criticized in the house meanwhile by Minority Leader Snell as "supercommission government."

"According to the present plan of our government, for 150 years hearings on legislation have been carried on by the proper committee having jurisdiction," Snell said. "It seems to me that is the proper forum for a business man or any other man. That certainly is the case unless we are going to change our whole procedure as far as the legislative body is concerned."

The 52 business men on Roper's committee included a number of those who attended the meeting in White Sulphur Springs a month ago and suggested among other things the establishment of such a committee.

C. J. JOHNSTON AGAIN TO HEAD FURNITURE CLUB

C. J. Johnston, president of the Furniture Club of America and executive furniture buyer for Sears, Roebuck & Co., was unanimously reelected head of the organization at the annual meeting of directors yesterday.

Guy Burnett, sales manager of Showers Brothers company, Bloomington, Ind., one of the largest furniture manufacturing concerns in the country, and R. D. Oilas, manager of the furniture department of the Fair store, Chicago, were named vice presidents. Lawrence H. Whiting, president of the American Furniture Mart, was selected as treasurer, and W. C. Gorgas was made executive secretary. Henry Rhode continues as manager.

Club executives predict further business gains judging by the success of the current January furniture market.

COTTON BREAKS ON SELLING ATTRIBUTED TO THE U. S.

Cotton markets, which were sharply higher Thursday following the announcement of the tax free quota under provisions of the Bankhead bill, turned reactionary yesterday and broke sharply. Selling attributed as probably for the account of government agencies was a factor. Closing trades were well toward the bottom, with net losses of 10 to 15 points in Chicago and 9 to 14 points in other markets.

Spot cotton closed 10 to 15 points lower, with New York, New Orleans, and Galveston 12.60 cents and Houston 12.65 cents per pound. Prices follow:

New York, Jan. 18.—[Special.]—The contrast between today's bond market and the active trading that developed just a week ago when the gold question came abruptly into prominence was pronounced. Whereas a week ago huge blocks of government bonds changed hands, especially in over-the-counter trading, today the turnover in that group was the smallest in many a day. However, improved prices predominated.

Another change that has come over the market in the last week is the disappearance of the suddenly developed preference for bonds containing the gold clause. Today there was no evidence that banks are longer entertaining seriously the thought that the government ever will pay a premium in the redemption of its obligations.

High Grade Bonds Sought.

Glit-edged corporate bonds have worked back into the same kind of market they were enjoying for several weeks before the gold discussion started in earnest. There are not many of these bonds for sale, and every time they are offered plenty of buyers are waiting to take them.

In today's light trading many of this class improved fractionally, including Southwestern Bell Telephone 5s, Union Pacific 4s of three issues, Philadelphia Electric 4s, Pennsylvania general 4½s, New York Steam first 5s, Cincinnati Terminal 5s of 1957, Chesapeake and Ohio general 4½s and refunding 4½s, and American Telephone convertible 4½s. The old record highs were improved upon in the case of Santa Fe general 4s and adjustment 4s, and Louisville Gas and Electric 5s.

Secondary Issues Active.

A good market prevailed for many second grade and speculative issues, particularly industrials. In fact, bonds of the secondary groups, which would not be especially benefited by a ruling against the administration's monetary program, made the best showing. A number of wide gains in scattered issues were attributed partly to business improvement affecting the companies concerned.

While Argentine bonds were subjected to some selling pressure, there was a strong market for Chilean and Colombian issues. With few exceptions foreign bonds were strong. German loans steadied and French liens improved.

General Baking.

Investors' Guide: I wish you would give me some information regarding General Baking common.—S. W.

Answer: General Baking company is one of the two largest units in the baking industry. About 90 per cent of its output is bread, production running about a million loaves a day.

Operations are conducted in twenty states, extending from Kansas, Nebraska, and Oklahoma eastward to the Atlantic seaboard. The $15,000,000 modernization and expansion program completed in 1931 brought total number of bakeries to sixty-five. These are located in fifty-six principal cities.

Earnings show the effects of higher flour prices, processing taxes, and higher wages. Keen competition has prevented the company from passing higher costs on to the consumer in the form of price boosts, although tonnage volume has increased.

For the first nine months of 1934 net income was $1,234,000, or 44 cents per common share, against net of $1,734,000, or 76 cents per common share, for the corresponding 1933 period.

In 1933 net income was $2,036,000, or 84 cents per common share, against net of $3,790,000, or $1.94 per common share, for 1932. Net income in 1931 was $4,838,000, against $5,166,000 for 1930. Earnings have declined steadily since the peak in 1927.

On Dec. 31, 1933, cash alone of $3,551,000 compared with total current liabilities of $1,288,000. Total current assets were $5,887,000.

There were $3,916,000 of 5½ per cent debentures outstanding. These have been called for redemption on Feb. 1, 1935, at 102½. After the retirement of the bonds capitalization will consist of 87,883 shares of no par $8 dividend preferred and 1,588,697 shares of $5 par common.

Dividends have been paid regularly on the preferred. The common currently pays 15 cents a quarter. The preferred deserves a fairly good rating. The common is speculative.

Nondepositors' Share.

Investors' Guide: I have some Cuban Dominican Sugar corporation 7½ per cent bonds, due 1944, on which interest is defaulted. Please give me what information you can on the bonds.—J. A. A.

Answer: Nondepositing bondholders are entitled to $79.32 for each $1,000 Cuban Dominican Sugar corporation bond with May 1, 1931, and all subsequent coupons attached. This can be obtained from the federal court of the southern district of New York, in New York City.

At DeLEE You Learn BEAUTY CULTURE

Quickly—Easily—Thoroughly.

QUICKLY—because you receive individual instruction under the personal direction of Madame Louise, internationally famous stylist and beauty expert.

EASILY—because DeLEE "University type" of training simplifies learning. You learn by practicing on living models. Classrooms are colorful, light and roomy. Equipment is 100% new and up-to-the-minute.

THOROUGHLY—because DeLEE does not graduate a student until she has attained genuine proficiency. At DeLEE you receive unlimited instruction at no extra cost. In fact, there are no "extra charges" for anything at DeLEE—one reasonable tuition fee covers everything.

Come in today and talk with the DeLEE Dean, Miss Ruby Lorrain Steven. Say or write for interesting book. Convenient terms can be arranged.
